Japanese Are Critical of U. S. Results of Y. W. C. A. Survey

JAPANESE national thought is distinctly critical of America and there is a definite feeling that the exclusion act has made Japan a victim of discrimination, according to a survey made public yesterday by the national board of the Young Women's Christian Association.

The survey, compiled from a questionnaire conducted by the Japan Times and from interviews with prominent Japanese women, is published in an issue of the Woman's Press, the official organ of the Y. W. C. A. Racial prejudice is given in Japan as the reason for the immigration act. Not all, however, feel that the act is unjust, and the survey points out that incidents of student demonstrations, suicide in protest and similar occurrences are isolated and rare.

The questionnaire discloses that 27 persons thought the immigration problem a domestic question with the United States, 16 held an opposite view, and 21 affirmed conditionally the right to exclude.

"The quota regulation," says the questionnaire, "is based on the number of immigrants who entered the United States in 1890, when there were hardly any Japanese immigrants entering America. Will you be satisfied if the quota regulation is applied to Japanese immigration on the same basis with other nationalists?" To this nine alone answered "Yes"; 27 said "No."

The questionnaire continues: Q. Do you think it a good plan for Japan that she allow mostly the lower class of laborers to emigrate to America?

A. Japanese immigrants were not inferior to European immigrants to the United States (11). Japan's policy of allowing low-class immigration was not good (32). It merely followed the natural course of economic events (15). America's economic demands were responsible for the immigration of this class of laborer (7).

Q. What do you think of the American attitude in placing strict restrictions on and in minimizing the number of those intelligent classes of Japanese going to America, such as members and clerks of Japanese banks and commercial houses already doing business in America, and also those who are going there to pursue studies in schools and colleges?

A. It is an expression of racial prejudice (4). Decline of the American sense of human justice (20). An unwise policy for America to follow (33). American dislike of Japanese in particular (10).

Q. President Coolidge is reported to have stated that the immigration disagreement between America and Japan is now closed. Do you really think the question is closed?

A. The question is closed (8). Japan cannot consider it closed (52). Do not care whether closed or not (4).

Q. What is your opinion in regard to the future of Christian missionary work among the so-called colored races? Will the racial discrimination in the new American immigration law hinder Christian propagation in the Far East?

A. There will be no effect (12). There will be a good effect (1). There will be an adverse effect (43). Christianity is already dead (4).

Q. What future course should America and Japan follow to improve the present relation? A. Cultivate better understanding between the two countries (11). Enter into reciprocal treaties (3). Abandon immigration (11). Destroy capitalist imperialism in both countries (9). Explain the absolute necessity of immigration (2). Enter into some agreement with respect to the Pacific policies of both countries (1). Start a campaign for racial equality (10). Strive to elevate the position of Japan (7). Bring closer the economic relations between the two countries (3). Solve this question through people's diplomacy (2). America must first change her immigration policy (2). Adopt "an eye for an eye" policy (2). Start a great "Asia for Asiatics" movement (5).

The New Governor of Indiana He Is a Real Self-Made Man

INDIANA'S new chief executive, Gov. "Ed" Jackson, may be listed in the ranks of self-made men. Maj. Jackson—he was commissioned during the world war—rose from an obscure lawyer in an Indiana village to be governor of his state. He began his career as a newsboy, stove factory hand, and hodcarrier.

When he was 18 he opened a law office at Vennard. Before many years he was elected prosecuting attorney, and then, a vacancy occurring, was promoted to a circuit judgeship. He was re-elected to this office for three consecutive terms.

In 1916 the Indiana Republican party nominated Jackson for secretary of state and elected him far ahead of the others on the ticket. It was this term that was broken up by his war service. He enlisted and entered the officers' training camp at Fort Benjamin Harrison, emerging as a captain. Later he was made a major.

C. of C. Campaign Given Boom

"When I compare my own efforts with those of him in this great work of developing this empire of the Southland," added the speaker, "my work seems flat and stale and unprofitable. But it is not, nor is yours. Any man who does his best to improve the community, city and state in which he lives, and whose effort is earnest and zealous, deserves as much credit as those who blaze the trails."

Calls for Native Sons Mr. Farrell called for a showing of hands of those who had been born in Southern California. There were eleven. He then announced that those who thought they were so fortunate were entitled to no credit, as the accident of location which they had any control, while the overwhelming number of those who had come to this section to live were entitled to all the praise for their judgment and initiative in establishing themselves in Torrance.

Mr. Farrell praised the men to have their home and business. With a quick thrust Mr. Farrell urged that if any one did not believe this to be true it was their duty to themselves and the community to take themselves to more congenial and profitable places, while if they did believe it, it was their duty to tell others of the reasons for their faith in the community and to take their part in passing on its advantages to others, in better condition than that in which they themselves received it.

Duty to Southland In a striking word picture Mr. Farrell told of his own journey into the "land of promise," of dropping down from the heights into the sun-kissed, rose-dotted valley of Southern California, on into the metropolitan area of Los Angeles, of the overwhelming sense of gratitude that swept him for the many privileges on every hand. The realization that he had contributed nothing in effort and expended no money in bringing about the vast empire with all its splendid opportunities that lay awaiting him and inviting him to participate in its growth, which was marked by the spirit of co-operation. We deeply appreciate the part that the men of Torrance have played in making possible the new women's clubhouse, which will soon be under construction. We also are cognizant of the Chamber service rendered by the Chamber of Commerce in making possible by its financial support the Mothers' Educational Center here during the past year.

"In your Chamber of Commerce work, when you find a task at which we can help, please command us."

"Every Rotarian in Torrance will be a member of the Chamber of Commerce or donate the amount of the dues to charity," said J. B. Hines, president of the Rotary Club. "The Chamber of Commerce will have the undivided support of Rotary."

Aid to Credit C. A. Paxman, president of the Merchants Credit Association, told of the aims and activities of that organization. He explained that the association is designed to facilitate the securing of credit by new residents who deserve credit. He pledged the support of the organization to the chamber.

Rev. F. A. Zeller, representing the churches, declared that the Chamber of Commerce in its program of stimulating growth and trade presupposes morality and hence has the enthusiastic support of the churches of the city.

"No citizen," he said, "has the right to kick against the Chamber of Commerce unless he is a member thereof."

Urges Co-operation Charles F. Bayer, secretary of the field secretary department of the Los Angeles chamber, urged the audience to carry on the work of developing the Southland. He asserted that the Los Angeles chamber is as interested in the development of the entire South-west as it is in the progress of the city of Los Angeles.

"If the people who live here," he declared, "don't think this is the best place on earth, they had best move out to a better place."

"Co-operation," he said, "is to conduct ourselves in such a manner that the other fellow can work with us."

Enthusiasm greeted the selections played by the Torrance Community Band. A vocal solo was sung by R. E. Stewart. Miss Elsie Teal favored with selections on the piano.

Praise Church Women The audience greeted with enthusiasm praise for the women of the Central Church Guild who so efficiently served the excellent dinner which they had prepared.

The four membership campaign teams met this morning at 9 o'clock to start the drive for 1925 members. The teams are captained by J. Wallace Post, J. B. Hines, J. C. Smith and Grover C. Whyte. The team members were introduced last night and enthusiastically applauded for their volunteer services on behalf of the chamber and the city of Torrance.

purposes of preparing and distributing the proposed industrial survey. This announcement was greeted with enthusiasm.

Dr. J. S. Lancaster, introducing the chairman of the meeting, W. Harold Kingsley, said: "I have been in Torrance since its early days. The city's history reminds me of a baby. It was born to excellent parents under auspicious circumstances. Then it got the measles, but recovered. Then it was taken with the whooping cough of the World War—but it survived and continued to thrive. Soon it reached the trying period of adolescence, during which it experienced a period of extravagance with its attendant high prices. Right after that it was victimized by a vamp—the oil boom. But now it has overcome this attack and has sobered down to serious business."

Mr. Kingsley introduced Mayor Smith, who declared that the board of trustees is morally and personally in hearty accord with the statement of the Chamber of Commerce.

"It is now time for every citizen to answer the question: 'Am I a real citizen or do I only live here?'" said the mayor.

Pledges Legion Support L. V. Babcock, commander of the Bert S. Crossland Post, American Legion, closed his remarks on the activities of the Legion with the statement: "At any time that the Chamber of Commerce requires the services of the Legion in any community activity, all the members have to do is say the word. We are behind the chamber 100 percent."

Jack Hansen, vice-president of the Torrance Business Men's Association, pledged the support of the business men to the chamber.

J. W. Macdowell praised the energies, judgment and enthusiasm of Carl L. Hyde, secretary of the chamber, and declared: "Mr. Hyde can accomplish nothing without the whole-hearted co-operation of the people of Torrance. The Chamber of Commerce is not Mr. Hyde, nor the board of directors—it is you, and will be just and only as good as you make it."

Women for Chamber Mrs. M. J. Fitzhugh, president of the Women's Club of Torrance, aroused the enthusiasm of the audience when she pledged the support of the women of this city to the work of the chamber.

"The Women's Club," said Mrs. Fitzhugh, "is honored by its participation in this meeting which is so marked by the spirit of co-operation. We deeply appreciate the part that the men of Torrance have played in making possible the new women's clubhouse, which will soon be under construction. We also are cognizant of the Chamber service rendered by the Chamber of Commerce in making possible by its financial support the Mothers' Educational Center here during the past year."
