OBSERVATIONS

of his attributes in trouble is sad enough. But to see him maligned as a bootlegger is outrageous.

And when his fellow townsmen hire loud-yelling Los Angeles news vendors to come to Torrance with papers for the sole purpose of shouting news of the case—distorted and false news of the case—the unjust and vindictive motives of these individuals are too apparent to require explanation.

WALLACE POST, your fellow townsmen are with you—not because you were arrested and fined, but because they know you for a man, a good man and a decent man—and because they are aware that you were singled out as a victim for definite motives and that men who have professed to be your friends sought to ruin your character by paying money out of their own pockets for the purpose of giving wide circulation in your own home city to news reports that were utterly false, unjust and outrageous.
