WRECKED FELLOWSHIP

It used to be when supper things were washed and put away, and the red glow of the grate-fire would warm the closing day, a friend or two who knew my ways and liked my easy chairs would drop in for a visit. And we'd spread our mental wares, each for the other's seeing, or we'd sit a while and smoke; and I have known long evenings through which neither of us spoke.

But now they never drop around when the day has turned to gloam; Or, if they chance to drop around, they never find me home.

Or when sometimes I hike along the street and reach their shack And try the knob of their front door, I grunt and amble back; For always their house stands at night forbiddingly, and stark, Like a ghost of the used-to-be-uprised from the dark.

With windows like dead eyes in the blank wall confronting me, And seeming to look out at me—yet seeming not to see; So I am glad to gather up my folks and hike away.

The world I know today is not the world of yesterday. Sometimes I meet up with the friends I used to know of yore, But we know contemplative nights by the grate-fire no more; Sometimes my telephone will ring and someone ask for me, Then someone will say: "Say, my size is thirty-three by three; Can you lend me an inner tube?" And I will answer back: "I haven't got an idle one. Can you lend me a jack?"

And that's our only interchange of speech—that kind of bunk! The fellowship of days of old has been rammed, jammed and sunk.

PHILOSOPHRIN

Sometimes my shoes hurt my fat feet until I want to howl, until I want to meet the world with a for-bidding scowl; but before I scowl or grudge I look to see if they're on right; and then I find they ain't. The right shoe is on the wrong foot, so I change them about; and then I kick my neighbor's wife and go cawking out. (Copyrighted)

Ah, Here Is the Leak of Nations

Customs inspectors at the Canadian border have increased their vigilance. Recently an ingenious and thirty motorist with a double-bottom gasoline tank was apprehended carrying about five gallons of the "oil of contraband." He nearly got away with it. Inspector V. R. Stand, at Blain, Wash., is seen here showing a Chevrolet tourist some of the ways the stuff leaks through.

Trio Rebekahs To Have Bazaar 27th

Big doings, folks, next Saturday, Nov. 27, when the Trio Rebekah bazaar starts at 1 o'clock. There'll be a splendid assortment of both fancy work and plain, practical everyday articles. There's to be booths where candy, doughnuts, ice cream and hot dogs and coffee will be sold, and a fish pond where the youngsters, and grown-ups too, will find amusement.

Giannini Banking Interests Enter Alhambra Field

Citizens Savings and Commercial Bank Bought by Americommercial

Announcement comes from the joint offices of L. M. MacDonald, president of the Americommercial Corporation, and Orta E. Monette, chairman of the board, of the purchase of the Citizens Savings and Commercial Bank of Alhambra.

The Americommercial Corporation is affiliated with the Bank of Italy interests, and has endeavored to continually strengthen its position by securing banks in progressive cities. Alhambra has made unusual strides in the past few years as an industrial center. Among its outstanding industries are: A wool converting plant for purposes and selling felt slippers throughout the world; a factory supplying the oil fields in the world with heat exchangers and

Athletic Club To Play Basketball; Players Sought

All basketball players are urged to go over to Sammons warehouse tomorrow night (Friday) at 7:30. Two teams at the least will be organized under the direction of the Torrance Athletic Club.

The club meets every Monday and Friday night. There were 21 enthusiastic young men present last Monday evening.

Club Members Hear Mrs. Irish's Address

Mrs. Leland Atherton Irish spoke before the Women's Club on headquarters fund and the Eleanor Joy Toll memorial. Mrs. Irish stressed the need of a headquarters for the district, and stated that if the 37,000 club women in the five counties of the Los Angeles district would each give one dollar the headquarters would be assured.

Forty-two clubs in the district have already subscribed 100 percent to this project, which will be dedicated to Eleanor Joy Toll as a memorial of her work in the district.

The Women's Club of Torrance voted to become a 100 percent club. Mary Harder again presented a plea for the ex-servicemen at Compton and more than $9 was raised by a silver offering, making over $20 contributed by the club toward the Christmas treats for these men and their families. Mrs. Harder also asked for old silk stockings to be made into rugs by these men.

Mrs. Phoebe Tolson of Arlington avenue has been appointed to look after the transportation to the presidents' council. Those having spare seats in their cars may notify Mrs. Tolson, and the club members without cars may let her know if they wish to find transportation for them.

The Torrance Relief, through which the club does its philanthropic work, was granted the privilege of meeting in the clubhouse, as their present quarters are too small.

Good attendance was reported at the art class under Mrs. R. R. Smith, which meets every Wednesday from 9 to 11:30 a. m., except the club luncheon day, when the class meets on Monday instead.

FRUIT MARKET OPENS

The American Fruit Market, located at the corner of Carson street and Gramercy avenue, formerly conducted by H. F. Miller, has been purchased and reopened by Joe Galdaris.

Mr. Galdaris states that his connections with some of the largest wholesalers of fruits and vegetables in Los Angeles County will enable him to offer local people a complete variety of products and the lowest market prices.

Daughters of Job Meeting Tonight

Mothers of daughters who are eligible to join the Daughters of Job are invited to attend the explanation of the work to be presented tonight, Thursday, Nov. 18, at Odd Fellows Temple, Redondo-Old Wilmington boulevard, Lomita, by Santa Monica Bethel.

Girls 12 to 18 years of age, daughters, granddaughters, sisters or nieces of Master Masons, are eligible.

absorption plants; a factory producing beekeeper's supplies; and another turning out soap and chemicals. The Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce has long regarded Alhambra as one of the surrounding cities with the most promising industrial future. This explains the need of additional financing which is now available through the entry into its new territory.
