Great Spy Drama, "Men of the Sky," Precedes Four-Day Showing of "Transgression" With Noted Stars

Scene taken from that Premiere attraction, "Transgression," starring Kay Francis and Ricardo Cortez, starting Sunday at Warner Bros. San Pedro Theater.

"Men of the Sky," the mystery romance which comes to the Warner Bros. Theater Thursday and plays through Saturday, deals with the intricate spy systems operating during the years preceding the World War. The thrilling sequences have to do with the doomed love of a youth and a girl thrown into the maelstrom of destruction. Secret intelligence systems, though not often publicly discussed, are operated by all nations. It is a matter of private record to be found in the secret archives of every government that each country knows the affairs of all the rest.

Coming Sunday for a four-day run, Warner Bros. will present "Transgression" in conjunction with some excellent short subjects: "Adventures in Africa" episode No. 10, gripping, enthralling scenes of "maneaters." Also other selected short subjects and Warner Bros. News.

No picture of recent months has evoked more spontaneous praise from critics than has "Transgression." The production is said to be far advanced in the realms of sheer beauty and dramatic strength. In this new film Herbert Brenon has achieved what he considers the ultimate in screen perfection. The cast includes many favorites: Kay Francis, Paul Cavagnagh, Ricardo Cortez, Nance O'Neill and Adrienne D'Ambrico.

But he so thoroughly enjoyed the Baby Party in the picture that he gave one recently for his friends in which he wore a dress and bonnet and rode in a baby carriage, drinking from a nursing bottle.

Mervyn LeRoy directed "Broad Minded." The supporting cast includes Ona Munson, William Collier Jr., Marjorie White, Holmes Herbert, Margaret Livingston, Thelma Todd, Grayce Hampton, Bela Lugosi and George Grandee.

Launching the second week of "August, Month of Stars," the Fox Plaza Theater announces another week of outstanding productions featuring big star names. For Friday and Saturday, Warner Oland is to be seen in a thrilling detective mystery romance in "The Black Camel," his latest Fox picture. A Mickey McGuire comedy entitled "Mickey's Musketeers," is also featured.

Sunday and Monday brings Norma Shearer in "A Free Soul," a picture that is said to far surpass her other most recent successes.

For Tuesday and Wednesday Douglas Fairbanks Jr. is to be seen in his first starring role in "Chances," a story taken from the best seller of the same title. A Mack Sennett comedy entitled "Monkey Business," completes the program.

Thursday only brings an all comedy production headed by "Six Cylinder Love" with Spencer Tracy, El Brendel and Edward Everett Horton in the featured roles. A Slim Summerville comedy entitled "Arabian Nights" and a Paramount act, "Fent House Blues," are also offered.

4 New Operas Will Be Produced During L. A. Season in Oct.

The Los Angeles Grand Opera Association has announced its completed plans for the eighth annual season, to be held at Shrine Auditorium October 2 to October 17, the most interesting in its history. Its highlights are: a premiere of a modern French opera as a spectacular opening performance; famous singers from the Metropolitan, La Scala, Paris, Berlin, Vienna and Bayreuth; three of Wagner's most popular scores with unexcelled German casts; great artists in favorite Italian operas; four new operas in the repertoire; and a new Carmen.

New operas include Henri Raubaud's delightfully melodious Marouf, a colorful and sparkling score based on the Arabian Nights' tale of the Cobbler and the Magic Lamp, and not yet heard on the Pacific Coast; Verdi's dramatic Masked Ball; and two of Wagner's masterpieces, Lohengrin and Die Meistersinger. The revivals are: in Italian, Aida, Il Trovatore and Tosca; in French, Carmen; and in German, Tannhauser.

Many new singers have been engaged: Maria Mueller is a young German soprano who has won world-wide recognition through her appearances at the Metropolitan and at Bayreuth; Yvonne Gall is the idol of the Paris Opera; Falta Petrova came to the Metropolitan last season after winning honors at the Moscow Opera; Maxine Castleton is a mezzo-soprano of rare beauty recently discovered in Los Angeles. Among the men newcomers are: Gottlieb Pistor, dramatic tenor from Cologne and Bayreuth; and choice of Toscanini for the performance of Parsifal at Bayreuth this summer; Friedrich Schorr, the outstanding German baritone of Berlin, Covent Garden, Bayreuth and the Metropolitan; and Arnold Gabor, and Mark Windheim, "character" baritones from the Metropolitan.
