Latest Reports from the OIL FRONT

P. V. Collier's Hunt No. 1 deep-sand well is now coring and will probably be brought in within 10 days, it was learned yesterday at the site located off the intersection of Hawthorne and Sepulveda boulevards. Collier confidently expects the Hunt bore to repeat the success of Flint No. 1, located a few hundred yards north. The Flint, operated by the Dearborn Oil Company, is producing 145 barrels of 20.0 gravity oil daily, cutting 22 from, from 4,556 feet.

Gene McLaren and associates are reconditioning the old Harbor Crude Oil Company No. 1, located on the Weston Ranch property in Waleria and are attempting to place it on production. This well was abandoned in 1914 after being drilled to 2,999 feet. New operators are reported to have leases and options on approximately 400 acres of the Weston property. Additional wells will be drilled pending the successful completion of this project.

Banker Claims Postal Savings Competitive

The operation of the Postal Savings Bank system in communities where adequate banking service is already rendered by private institutions is being given study by the American Bankers Association, according to Hugh L. Clary, vice-president of the Bank of America. "The original purpose of the Postal Savings Act was to provide noncompetitive savings facilities in communities where adequate banking service was not available," said Clary. "A survey has shown that the Postal Savings has worked in a direction exactly opposite to this."

There are no postal savings banks in fourth class post offices, serving small communities where banking facilities might be inadequate. In the large metropolitan centers, where adequate banking facilities are present, the Postal Savings banks are most active," continued Clary. He further stated that it is the desire of the banking studies committee to urge Congress at its next session to take steps to bring the operation of the Postal Savings Act more in line with its original purposes.
