JAMESTOWN, N. Y. (U.P.)—The Chautauqua County Historical Society is investigating the discovery of four skulls and a pile of bones believed to be those of Negro slaves owned by William Prendergast, who settled here in 1808. Martin P. Whallon, chairman of the county board of supervisors, said the skulls probably were from a private cemetery on the Prendergast land holdings. They were unearthed by a shovel on the farm of Cale Douglas at Prendergast Point, near Chautauqua Lake.

New Type Guitar Born As Result of Adversity

NEW ORLEANS (U.P.)—It was easier for Simon Peter Haley, painter, to get a couple of books out of the library on wood carving than it was for him to buy a guitar so he made the guitar—in two months time. It was the first woodwork Haley ever had done and he is so pleased with some of the additions to the instrument that he may patent several of them. Haley specially designed the sound chamber. Instead of flat, the chamber reproduces a rich, round tone.

Birds Make Pattern on Yearly Flight

"Music on the wires" is an apt title for this photograph of a myriad of birds which, bound North on their spring flight, paused to rest on these telephone wires in North Carolina. Only a little imagination is needed to see them as notes on a music staff drawn against the sky.

Troy, N. Y., Claims First 'Uncle Sam' Figure Entrenched in Local History

TROY, N. Y. (U.P.)—A slaughterhouse owner, tall and thin, with graying hair, was the original of the cartoonist's "Uncle Sam." Troy historians contend in denying claims from other sections regarding the origin of the term.

He was Sam Wilson, a packer, who moved from Mason, N. H., in 1789 and settled near Troy. During the War of 1812, Wilson became associated with Elbert Anderson, who had a contract to supply meat to Federal troops stationed at what is now Clinton Heights, N. Y., and at Newburgh.

Up to this time Wilson, was known as "Uncle Sam" and his wife, the former Betsy Mann, as "Aunt Betsy" because of their local philanthropy.

Rutherford B. Hayner, former editor of the Troy newspaper and local historian, offers an explanation of how the title "Uncle Sam" was spread until it came to be a national colloquialism.

Hayner wrote a historical record that Anderson and Wilson shipped meat to troops in casks marked with their initials. But instead of using S. W., Wilson used the initials for "Uncle Sam," so that the casks were labeled "E. A.—U. S." In explanation of how the meat packer's name came to signify the United States, Hayner recounted this incident:

"When a large consignment of meat was awaiting shipment a party of visitors landed at this dock and on seeing this pile of freight, inquired of the watchman (an Irishman who was one of Uncle Sam's employees) who the owners were, and the watchman replied: 'It's all marked, sir, and belongs to Mr. Anderson and Uncle Sam.'"

"Then the people asked who 'Uncle Sam' was. The reply was: 'Why, don't you know? He owns nearly all about here and it is he who is feeding the army.'"

Hayner explained that the remark was variously interpreted, but the impression grew that the initials U. S. stood for United States, and that "Uncle Sam" was a local name for the country. Soldiers spread the story. The story is repeated in a local history written by Arthur J. Waite.

Joseph Baake secretary to Mayor Frank J. Hogan, said Troy was prepared to defend its right to be called "Uncle Sam's" home. Several years ago a monument was dedicated in Oakwood Cemetery where Wilson was buried. A tablet states that Wilson was the "original Uncle Sam." Wilson was born in 1787. He died July 31, 1864.

A somewhat similar version of the "Uncle Sam" has arisen in the South. At Daleville, Miss., a historical society believes Gen. Sam Dale was the man who typified "Uncle Sam." He also provided provisions for soldiers in the War of 1812 and was called "Uncle Sam" by Tennessee mountaineers in Gen. Andrew Jackson's army.

Employers Must Register with State Bureau

If you are an employer of not less than four employees engaged in industry or commerce (agriculture is excepted), you will be subject to the penalty if you do not register with the State Department of Employment to protect your employees on job insurance, under the Unemployment Compensation phase of the Social Security Act.

"October 1 is the deadline," Edwin A. Bird, local manager, said this week. "We appreciate that most unregistered employers do not desire to evade the law, but simply are unfamiliar with it, as the four-to-seven group did not come under job insurance until this year. There are 15,000 employers who have not yet registered, and we urge them to do it now, because their registration has to be fully checked by October 1—that is the date benefits become payable to unemployed workers in this group. These 75,000 employees must be taken care of on time."

"Employers should contact the office of the California State Employment Service at 1927 Carson street or district headquarters of the Department of Employment in the Chamber of Commerce Building, Los Angeles, for forms on which to register," Bird said.

critical terms and the the scene is Louisiana and the period from 1860 to 1885 it is not another Civil War novel. Moreover only in a certain sense can it be called a historical novel, rather it is the story of two women whose lives were shaped by their times and by the impact of the terrific experiences which they shared with other men and women. Miss Bristow has a decided knack for making the reader feel contemporary with the people of her novel. One shares the varying fortunes of her two heroines, one belonging to the wealthy planter class, the other a poor white, as they come into contact and, inevitably, into conflict.
