"Trailer Vagabond" Tours Lordsburg, N. M.

By WARREN BAYLER

All major highways converge at various points east of Lordsburg, N. M., and pass through town as a single unit. West of the city they split again, giving the traveler a choice of three different routes to the coast.

Described by the late Arthur Brisbane as being destined to become one of the great health resorts of the world, it possesses one of the most healthful year around climates to be found. The United States Weather Bureau describes the climate as "dry, mild, sunny, generally invigorating and comfortable."

If you saw the motion picture "Stage Coach" you have a good mental picture of the surrounding country. The picture was taken from the story "Stage of Lordsburg."

covered with snow and ice, this route furnishes a minimum of unpleasant weather and driving conditions. The second reason is altitude. To my mind this is almost as important as the first.

Many people, especially those advanced in years, have difficulty in high altitudes. To the north the passes range from 7,000 to 10,000 feet above sea level. Here on the southern route, the Continental Divide, just east of Lordsburg, is a little under 5,000 feet or slightly less than the altitude at Denver, Colorado which lies 30 miles east of the actual Rocky Mountain range.

Brilliantly Lighted

The last important reason is of interest only to the first tripper — Old Mexico. As most of the routes either pass through or come close to El Paso, Texas, a side trip across the border can be made with little inconvenience.

Some three miles south of the city is the old town of Shakespear, the original stop on the stage-coach route because of its nearby springs. Several of the original buildings are still standing and furnish a historic background for a side trip if one is not pressed for time.

Way up high

There are several reasons why this most southern of all transcontinental highways is the most popular of the winter routes. The first of these is, of course, weather.

In any event I hope your first glimpse of the city is at night. As you approach it you get the impression of a farm house or barn afire in the distance. As the miles click off and you come closer and closer you realize the brighter glow in the sky is caused by Neon signs. The main street is probably as well lighted as any similar one in the United States.

The Lordsburg Chamber of Commerce tells the entire story

Bank Statement Reflects Growth of Community

Bank of America's year-end statement of condition, just released, is of particular interest to this community because of its importance to the business life of this area, according to Dean L. Sears, manager of the Bank of America branch here.

"A specific indication of the usefulness of this bank," he said, "is shown in the statement by the vast amount of money advanced to business and to individuals, vitally stimulating trade and employment throughout our state. Our branch here is proud to have an important part in this activity."

"The growth of our business demonstrates that our efforts to serve the proper financial needs of the community and surrounding area are meeting with wide approval."

ALL TIME HIGH

An all-time high in motor vehicle registration was reached in the United States during 1939 when registrations exceeded 30,000,000 for the first time.

on their stationery — "No Mud, No Snow, No Ice, Just Go. But always stop in Lordsburg."
