Fumes from burning sulphur forced city firemen to don gas masks for the first time in several years last Friday night when they were called to extinguish a blaze at the United Sulphur and Chemical company plant on 213th street below Border avenue.

Two other fires during the week were put out by Torrance firemen.

The sulphur blaze was outside of the company plant (formerly the old bean storage warehouse) and was confined to a pile of unrefined chemicals which became ignited by spontaneous combustion, it was reported. No damage was done.

Monday morning firemen were called to a house at 2410 229th street occupied by E. Z. Lopp where wiring was reported burning. Investigation disclosed that a penny had been used instead of a fuse to restore current when a fuse burned out. Fire Chief J. E. McMaster said. Only slight damage was caused by the fire.

The top of a pile of couch cushions was burned in a store-room at the El Cajon Court, 2075 Torrance boulevard Tuesday morning. The blaze was evidently started by a match or cigarette tossed thru a broken window to the room.

Open Sump Holes May Be Ordered Enclosed By New City Law

Legislation designed to prevent the establishment of unprotected oil sump holes here in the future is to be drafted by the city ordinance committee as result of an investigation made by City Councilman James Hitchcock and City Engineer Leonard Young this week. Young reported to the city council Tuesday night that the C. C. M. O. is obtaining bids now to clean up its holes along Hickory avenue but there were several others on the east side of that street which are unprotected.

The engineer said the oil company which owns the sumps is composed of a syndicate of "about a dozen persons who are scattered from here to Armenia" and it would be difficult to pin anyone down to get the property cleaned up. It was indicated the city may erect fences about the sites until some contact is made with the owners.

Grape Crop Looks Good But Prices May Be Unsettled

SACRAMENTO (U.P.)—Barring unforeseen developments, California grape growers are going to have a 1940 crop almost as good and heavy as the 1939 yield but economic conditions are more unsettled because of the curtailing of export trade. an interest in the proceedings. Because the land has been transferred many times, the search is very complicated but they promised to have it finished some time this week.

Stating that it desired to "expand social activities in Torrance," the Coordinating Council requested the use of the Civic Auditorium on Wednesday nights as well as Friday evenings for a series of mid-week dances beginning July 31. The request was referred to the city building committee.

Use of the picnic tables now at the city park for the proposed barbecue to be served free to all riders and musicians in the Factory Frolic parade Sept. 28 was granted the Frolic committee headed by L. J. Gilmeister. He wrote that the committee is considering the barbecue and it would be held in El Prado park, with the serving tables located on the south side of El Prado and east of Arlington avenue. The Frolic committee is now endeavoring to find some organization which will take the barbecue concession.

"But don't start kicking your old men off without some retirement compensation," Gilbert warned. "When the fire trucks took the place of fire horses we didn't shoot those old four-footed veterans—we put them out to pasture for the rest of their lives. You can do as much for men."

Tiscareno of Ideal Ranch Market Sets Feast for Scribes

Sports writers are considered good eaters. In "covering" such attractions as football games, ice hockey, golf tournaments, tennis matches and horse races, they enjoy a bill of fare that ranges from the lowly but succulent hot dog to the elegant and tasty steaks and roasts.

But last Monday night, the scribes of sports were treated to something a bit different in menus when they were guests of the Palos Verdes Country club on the eve of the current invitation tournament. There they feasted on a suckling pig and some choice game—provided by Frank Tiscareno, who operates the meat department at the Ideal Ranch Market on Torrance boulevard.

Tiscareno inspected scores of young pigs before finally selecting the porker for the sports writers' banquet. He also carefully selected the game—pheasant, grouse and fancy sea-food. Reports from the dinner indicate that the scribes enjoyed the feast and Tiscareno's reputation as a caterer has been given a nice boost as result of his attention to the piece de resistance of the banquet.
