Juett groped for her, caught her arm and pulled her out. Inspiration to Thousands For an hour all three clung to their necks and cried for help. Their calls were finally heard by Phil Peppin, Los Angeles, who threw them a rope and hauled the women out with Juett's aid.

Juett is a carpenter, employed at the P. E. Shops, and he lives at the Roi Tan hotel. He was greatly surprised to receive the following letter from Edward G. Lansdale, secretary of the valor award committee: "It is my most pleasant duty to inform you that the committee, by a unanimous decision, has cited you to receive the Wellman Valor Award Medal. Your selfless courage in rescuing Mrs. Nita Blanton and Mrs. Leah Aideman on April 12 has caused our sincere admiration and we know that thousands of Californians will receive inspiration from your heroic act."

FROM OIL WELL TO GREENHOUSE . . . It remained for John and William Hiney, Jr., building contractors, to find a good use for foundations of old oil wells. Here is John Hiney standing beside the large lathhouse which he built on the rear of the property at 2343 241st st., where the builders are erecting a fine new home for Major and Mrs. Max Cox, who now live next door.

An oil well base is ideal for a greenhouse, the brothers Hiney proved when they covered the pit with concrete and used the foundations of the derrick for bases of the floral arbor and fish pond that will enhance the new home of Major and Mrs. Cox. The Hineys also converted the foundation for the old pump house into a store room. Formerly operating in Wilmington, the Hineys are now centering their attention on the need for new homes in Torrance and Lomita. They plan to take out builders' licenses in Torrance soon and will then be available to potential new homeowners in this city. They have devoted the past 20 years to home construction and they claim a long list of satisfied owners who have found their work first class in every respect.

70 Children in Elementary School Operetta to Be Staged May 20-21

The Torrance Elementary school will present the operetta "The Early Bird Catches the Worm" in the high school auditorium, Wednesday, May 21, at 7:30 p. m. It will also be given Tuesday, May 20, at 3 p. m. for the benefit of school children. The admission price will be 10 cents for children and 25 cents for adults.

The operetta cast is made up of a barnyard aggregation of roosters, hens, farmers, geese and worms. About seventy children from the third to the sixth grades, inclusive, take part. They have been practicing faithfully during the past month.

A humorous plot runs thru the operetta featuring a broadcast by President Rooster warning the fowls to look out for marauding enemies such as foxes and hawks. His wife, the First Lady, sets on a huge egg through much of the first act and large excitement reigns in the barnyard when quintuplets are hatched. The last quint is very weak and falls to the floor. His ailment is diagnosed as turnbletis by Dr. Quack the Goose who prescribes a diet of toothpicks to strengthen the Quint's legs. An Egg Plant tries to muscle into the inner circle of hen house society, but is ostracised by society leaders when it is proven she is afraid of worms. The proceeds of the operetta will be used by the P.T.A. to continue the splendid welfare work they are doing, and by the school to purchase costumes for the orchestra and harmonica band to be used next year.

The teachers in charge have produced some realistic and attractive costumes. The faculty is confident the operetta will be well worth seeing. The cast is as follows: President Rooster, Darrell Kelfert; Goose Waddles, Billy Morgan; Doctor Quack, Bruce Penner; First Lady, Nelle Hookett; Egg Plant, Shirley Severin; Farmer, Vernon Johnson; Farmer's Wife, Dorothy Moore; City Boy, Lloyd Treasure; City Girl, Rachel Bowan; Kite, Duane Steele; and Farmer Boy, Ralph Hammond.

Farmer Girl, Anna Svenski; Pirate Hawk, Merwin Jarrett; Fox, Joseph Ban; Little Foxes, Patricia Findley and Billy Tolson; Hens, Wilma Jean McBride, Nancy Ann Murphye, Eleanor Salm, Neva Jean Murphy, Jettie Seaborn and Jean van Trutzschler.
