Increased Taxes Will Hit Cities Hard, Report

Any boost in the general county tax levy would be felt severely by taxpayers in some of the cities of the county, where increases in tax rates also loom, it was pointed out this week. Los Angeles city budget experts are hoping to avoid an increase in the general city tax rates, but an increase looms for the Los Angeles city school district, one of the largest districts in the world.

This week it was disclosed by City Manager Carl R. Erickson of Long Beach that his budget for the port city would call for an increase of eight cents per $100 of assessed valuation. This would make the rate 98 cents, or just one cent short of the $1 tax limit, it was explained. Public hearings on the county budget for next year began Monday at the supervisors' meeting room.

Alondra Park Camp Said Temporary

Assurance has been given by Col. Wayne Allen, chief administrative officer for the county, that the use of existing S. R. A. buildings in Alondra Park by unemployed single men on the county rolls will be only temporary—for about a year. This answer was given Tuesday to protests filed with the county supervisors by civic groups and residents in Gardena and vicinity of Alondra Park.

Allen, in a letter to Secretary Pat MacDonnell of the Gardena Valley Chamber of Commerce, said that "continuation of the use of Alondra Park facilities is designed as a temporary measure only to house the type of individuals who could perform certain light work in connection with improvement of the park. This is not designed to be permanent and the county contemplates moving these (S. R. A.) buildings when the work to be performed has been completed, i. e., when the park is available for use as a park and playground—estimated approximately a year from date."

At the supervisors' meeting Tuesday the protests were briefly mentioned and Supervisor Oscar Hauge said he was in accord with the objections. However, he pointed out that the matter would have to be ruled on by the county counsel and he would be governed by an opinion from that official.

Week's Building Totals $1,070

Corrigan Would Like to Locate Airplant Here

"Of such is fame" might well be the gist of Corrigan's thoughts as he is shown here in front of a bronze memorial at the Long Beach Municipal Airport marking the start of his "wrong way" flight to Ireland.

Cabrillo Ave. Strip Judgment Received

A copy of the final judgment won by the city in the Cabrillo ave. P. E. right-of-way "friendly condemnation" suit has been received. City Attorney John McCall informed the city council Tuesday night. City Clerk A. H. Bartlett was instructed to record the judgment.

No decision has been reached as yet as to who—the P. E. or the city—will remove the tracks and railway equipment from the center strip in order to permit ultimate improvement of Cabrillo from curb-to-curb.

and drank one glass of water," he recalled. Corrigan said he enjoyed the barnstorming tour he made of the U. S. on his return. He said a crowd of 1,500,000 greeted him in New York and he was showered with 1,900 tons of ticker tape and other litter (more than that showered on Lindbergh.)

Favors Lindbergh's Stand Concerning Lindbergh, Corrigan maintains the Colonel is right in his isolationist stand against the entry of this country in the war. "I'm for giving Britain all the materials and supplies she needs—in exchange for the free gift of some of her bases in the Western Hemisphere if England can't pay the cost—but I don't believe we should do more than that," he said. "I won't be stampeded into believing that Hitler is planning to invade us in the next year or two. When he does come—if ever—we'll be ready for him."

Corrigan lives in Leimert Park with his wife—but he doesn't have a telephone. "Too many practical jokers who would like to call up and ask me if I could tell them where they are going," he grinned. "I could—but the telephone company wouldn't like my language."
