Women's Army Corps Now Being Recruited Thruout U.S.

Recruiting for the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps First Officer Candidate School began yesterday, the War Department reported. Application blanks may be obtained only by going in person to one of the 440 regular Army recruiting stations throughout the country. The term of enrollment will be for the duration of the war and for not more than six months thereafter. Officer Candidates must be citizens of the United States, between the age of 21 and 45, with a high school education or its equivalent, in good health and of excellent character. They may be married or single. The first class will consist of approximately 450 women, and will begin about July 15.

Members of the W.A.A.C. will be chic in khaki. The war department has picked the uniform forms, and aside from silks and satins there's quite a variety of materials. Skirts will prevail in all cases. For summer there's khaki cotton twill and gabardine. For winter there's olive drab covert cloth.

The hosiery will be cotton and rayon, but no one in the department had a word to say about the underthings, either summer or winter. A W.A.A.C. officer in the winter time will wear a single-breasted four-button dark olive drab jacket of covert cloth and a six-panel flared skirt of light or dark olive drab. A covert cap will have a semi-stiff crown, a visor and a cloth chin strap.
