SUMMER SERENADE

(From August Cosmopolitan Magazine)
By OGDEN NASH
When the thunder stalks the sky,
When tickle-footed walks the fly,
Look, my darling, that's July.
Though the grassy lawn be leather,
And prickly temper tug the tether,
Shall we postpone our love for weather?
If we must melt, let's melt together!

AT BAY CITIES

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Sana recently returned from a vacation at Oakland and San Francisco where they visited friends.

Navy Patrols Maintain Lonely But Vigilant Guard On S. C. Islands

Southern California won't be caught napping. On lonely, wind-swept islands off the coast, the U. S. Navy maintains patrols which keep a 24-hour watch for enemy planes and submarines.

Look at a map and you'll see that a chain of outposts—paratroopers before the war—forms an ideal protection for approximately 200 miles of Southern California coastline.

With spy glass and binoculars the keen-eyed sailors of these offshore island patrols scan the light blue skies and the darker blue waters for strange planes and unfamiliar ships. If anything suspicious is sighted it is at once reported and investigated.

Sailors Carefully Selected

The Navy men are stationed on high points from which they can watch in all directions. Frequent inspections of the island beaches are also made. The Navy sees to it that no Japanese submarine puts into one of the out-of-way harbors to refuel or to pick up provisions which may have been cached there.

The Navy patrols are equipped with powerful two-way radios. Reports on the movements of ships and planes, as well as weather observations are made at regular intervals.

It seems like a lonely, thankless job. But it is an important one which must be done and the men make the best of it.

Sailors chosen for these island patrols are carefully selected on the basis of aptitude and temperament. They must be familiar with the silhouette characteristics of enemy ships and planes; they must know how to operate a radio; and they must know the elements of weather observation.

Beaches are Unspoiled

Only volunteers are taken, because a man who doesn't choose this kind of restricted life of his own accord soon becomes unhappy.

But for a man who has a touch of Robinson Crusoe in his makeup, it's an idyllic existence. When the men are not on duty there's much to do and see.

The island beaches are unspoiled by the litter of tin cans, hamburger wrappers, and soda pop bottles which are usually a mark of civilization. The wind-patterned sands are jeweled with shells and stones. At low tide clams and abalones (some containing small pearls) can be found and fishing in the waters near shore is excellent. The crops with game.

Often, especially after storms, a "Japanese invasion party" lands on the beaches. These are the glass balls used by Nipponese fishermen instead of corks to float their nets. Storms and currents carry these greenish-gray globes 5,000 miles across the Pacific. They range in size from a baseball to a basketball.

The L. A. Board of Education announced the names of winners in the poster contest held in the Los Angeles high school district (including Torrance and Lomita) to promote the sale of War Bonds and Stamps this week. Designers of the winning thrift posters were awarded prizes totaling $150 in bonds and stamps.

Peggy Dresser of Lomita took first prize in the senior high school division of the contest.

A. J. Gray, director of the Los Angeles City and County School Savings Association, which sponsored the contest, said that more than 380 students from 67 high schools entered the competition.

"Exhibits were outstanding and showed a real understanding of both the need and the purpose behind the government's campaign for bond and stamp sales," Gray said.

Winning posters are on display this week in the lobby of the Security-First National Bank at Sixth and Spring sts. in Los Angeles.

Here's Where YOU Get Paid!

ADVERTISING works two ways.

IT PAYS the advertiser to "run" advertisements—and it pays YOU to read them!

WHY? Because that's the ONLY way you can keep abreast of new trends and developments in the merchandise you're interested in. Because you can SAVE time, effort and money by learning, through the advertisements, where to find the "best buys" and the outstanding values.

"Hit-or-miss shopping" is as old-fashioned as the tandem bicycle. The MODERN shopper reads the advertisements every day!
