L.A. Crowing Rooster Law Causing Trouble For City Prosecutor

Enforcement of the "crowing rooster" ordinance adopted by the Los Angeles city council is helping a lot of trouble upon Donald Redwine, assistant city attorney. Here is a sample of the difficulties he is encountering almost daily:

"Look!" exclaimed a voice over the telephone. "The guy on the south of me has a crowing rooster, the guy to the east has geese and the guy on the north has ducks."

"What's doing on the western front?" asked Redwine.

"That guy has four tabby cats and they all have boy friends and they raise 'Ned all night."

"Cats can raise all the heck they want to," Redwine replied. "It's legal. What do you keep in your back yard?"

"I keep guinea hens."

"Come in and see me," Redwine invited. "Bring all your neighbors along. You can complain against each other."
