

Shorting Of County In U.S. Housing Hit

Supervisor William A. Smith has charged that Los Angeles County has been "shorted" by the federal government in the allotment of housing for veterans in unincorporated territory.

Smith said that he had received word from Langdon Post, regional director for the FPHA, that Los Angeles County was to receive 305 veteran housing units for unincorporated territory as the county's quota of 100,000 units provided in the recent bill passed by Congress.

Smith stated that on the basis for the county's population, 181 more housing units should have been allotted and complained that federal authorities had based the county's quota on the 1940 census.

Smith contends that the county has increased its population since that time.

ARTIFICIAL MEANS?

In speaking on the floor of Congress recently, Congressman Gwynne said: "Every country, having enjoyed a synthetic prosperity during the time it was engaged in the business of killing, now is determined to keep up existing levels by artificial means."

OPA Boards Have New Hours; Open 9 A.M. to 4 P.M.

New hours for OPA price control boards throughout Southern California were announced today by O. K. Collins, district price control board executive of the government agency.

Effective Feb. 1, all boards will be open to the public from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday. The new schedule, Collins said, will give increased service to Southland citizens and will enable the agency to do a better job. Boards will not be open on Saturdays.

The function of the boards is now limited to price control matters and all persons are urged to report overcharges to their boards immediately so that investigations and proper action may be taken.

The OPA price control board serving the Torrance and Lomita area is located in the Municipal Auditorium, foot of American ave., in Long Beach.

Elimination Of 'Blighted' Areas Outlined

The steps by which California communities can take advantage of the Community Redevelopment Act of 1945 are clearly shown in a report released today by the State Reconstruction and Reemployment Commission. The report, issued in the form of a pamphlet entitled "Blighted," points out that it is now possible for local governments to preserve human values and to save untold millions in taxes by "mobilizing resources behind the most dramatic reclamation project of our time."

The report demonstrates how communities may eliminate slum conditions of neglected and wasted sections of cities, put them to new and better uses, aid in raising standards of health and morals and restore physical values to the tax rolls.

Torrance has no "blighted" areas, but there is a condition in the Los Angeles shantytown strip east of Torrance in which civic organizations here have interested themselves.

The report shows that the Commission, which brought together the groups that drafted the legislation, is taking four major steps to help bring the act into full usefulness. These are:

1. Assistance in carrying through the California courts the test case to which the new basic laws are subjected.
2. Investigation of the details of financing urban redevelopment projects through a group of financial authorities.
3. Formation of "redevelopment teams," composed of persons who are experts in city planning, construction, finance and other fields connected with community rebuilding. These "teams" will be available, without cost, to consult with citizens interested in using the Community Redevelopment Act.
4. Distribution of the pamphlet "Blighted," which tells about the new law and how to use it.

The pamphlet singles out examples of how blight affects a modern community by citing instances in San Francisco, Los Angeles, San Diego, Lodi, Huntington Beach, Sacramento and Upland. These cities assisted the Commission by supplying data which shows how the use of the law may contribute to both the human and financial welfare of a community.

It is pointed out that almost every other city in California shares with these cities the problems which can be solved by putting the Community Redevelopment Act into practical use.

It is shown that the governmental functions of communities may be put to use in assisting private enterprise to carry out redevelopment projects.

Alondra Park Drilling Bids Are Encouraged

According to Supervisor Raymond, V. Darby, the Board of Supervisors at its Tuesday meeting instructed County Counsel to prepare amended specifications for bids for the exclusive right to slant drill under Alondra Park, changing the number of wells to be drilled from not more than one well to 20 acres to not more than one well for each 10 acres, and requiring that at least one string of tools be kept in continuous operation, allowing not more than 90 days to elapse between the completion of one well and the spudding of the next one, and that thereafter drilling operations be prosecuted with due diligence on each well until its completion. Under the original specifications all drilling operations were to be completed within a two-year period and this change will permit of the more orderly prosecution of the work to its completion.

Patience does not mean indifference. We may work and wait, but we ought not to be idle or careless while waiting.

Red Cross Needs Will Increase

"Demands for Red Cross services in Southern California during 1946 will equal if not exceed those performed during any of the war years."

Raymond H. Barrows of San Francisco, Pacific Area office, Deputy Manager, so stated at the one-day fund campaign conference held at local Red Cross headquarters last week for representatives of chapters throughout the southland and Arizona.

"This is particularly reflected in Los Angeles and vicinity where of the $4,235,000 total goal sought, approximately 70 per cent will be expended within the area served by the Red Cross chapter here," Barrows said. "Through the war years, the large bulk of moneys collected during fund campaign drives was directed to national headquarters for overseas programs."

Barrows and other Pacific Area office officials for the past several weeks have been on an inspection tour of the seven Far Western States to determine needs for Red Cross services.
