Mayors of Redondo Beach, Gardena, Palos Verdes, Hermosa Beach and Manhattan Beach met each to name a delegate from his city to the board. The latter two mayors did not submit a name.

When the six names are listed they will be sent to the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors and five will be selected to comprise the board.

Others named are: Pat Hanna, Gardena; Earl E. Parkhurst, 1544 Paseo Del Mar, Palos Verdes Estates and Albert G. Bailey, 322 N. Francisca ave., Redondo Beach.

MUTE EVIDENCE... Rev. Morris Singer, Wayside chapel pastor points to line showing where a sewage overflow marked a church bulletin board, the line, parallel to the floor of the floor of the chapel upon which the bulletin board rested, is about six inches above the floor. County sewage overflowed, covering the entire chapel floor to the chancel, on August 6.

Services Cancelled For Month At Wayside Following Sewage Overflow

Gallons of Los Angeles County sewage flowed into Wayside chapel, 29th and Cayuga sts., last week covering the entire floor of the building to the chancel, steps with about six inches of the debris. Rev. Morris Singer, Wayside chapel pastor, stated today.

Discovered on Wednesday of last week by a neighbor who noticed seepage through the east wall of the chapel, the sewage entered the building through lavatories in the rear, flowed into the chapel itself and out on to the front lawn, the irate pastor said.

Apparently caused by some failure in the city sewer system, the flow, once discovered, was halted with little difficulty, Rev. Singer said.

Damage to the chapel was undetermined but some books and blackboards were rendered unusable. Drapes were also damaged.

Sunday's sermon was heard at the home of J. S. Boren, 26314 Zephyr ave., Harbor City. Rev. Singer said he was called to the scene about 3 p.m. Wednesday, Aug. 8, to find that the whole interior of the chapel, except the chancel, was under "water."

Several calls to various health authorities, the city sewer officials, and plumbers, succeeded in having the flow stopped but yielded no results as far as cleaning and decontaminating the building was concerned, Rev. Singer stated.

A working party consisting of the pastor, J. S. Boren, Ray Hutson, Marvin Scott, Harold Eades and Lowell Benfer was formed and labored in cleaning and hosing out the inside of the chapel, finishing about 9 p.m., Rev. Singer said.

Considering the chapel still far from fit for human habitation, Rev. Singer said he managed to obtain a bit of advice from a representative of the County Health department.

"Clean it up yourself," the pastor quoted as the general gist of the advice given him by a health department employee.

An emergency meeting of the church's directors was held Wednesday and, according to Rev. Singer, the matter was referred to the church's legal department.

Marks on chairs and blackboards which were on the chapel floor at the time of the unwelcome "flood," indicated the depth of the "moisture" to be from four to six inches.

Rev. Singer, fearing possible infection, particularly among the smaller children, said he immediately closed the chapel to all visitors.
