ed his own mobile choir while transporting the children to and from school. Jerry Davidson, former Alhambra and Los Angeles playground director, Jay Stroh, physical education major, and Myrna Loy Fossum, Coach Cole announced that several positions for women were still open and those who feel qualified should contact him at Torrance High School.

Little activity will be conducted at the high school since summertime repairs to building and equipment would hamper an organized program, Cole said.

Calling for a total expenditure of $7210, the program was drafted by Emmett Ingram, business manager of the school district, and approved by the Board of Education prior to submitting the plan to the city council. Under the plan the city and the school district will split salary costs with the city furnishing sports equipment and other paraphernalia and the school board providing access to buildings at the various school locations.
