WHAT THE HECK —will your vote mean? BOB HAGGARD Your vote will mean more than you think... because the councilmen you elect decide on matters that affect your everyday life in Torrance. They decide about your police and fire protection. They decide about the zoning in your part of the community. They decide about your streets and sidewalks. And, by gosh, sidewalks are important. If you don't think so, walk four or five blocks to school with your children along a muddy path after the rains. I'LL DO ALL I POSSIBLY CAN to keep our children off the busy highways—away from heavy trucks and high-speed traffic. AND I'LL CONTINUE TO SUPPORT the Torrance Traffic Department in asking state installation of important traffic signals on Highway 101 at the entrance to Seaside and Hollywood.

Council Briefs

Use of the Civic Auditorium (the Council, at which time City Atty. Hall is to present a proposed ordinance setting the fees.

A request by Bernice Blunk of the South Bay Humane Society that the city enact an ordinance prohibiting merchants and others from dyeing and exhibiting baby chickens for Easter was referred to City Attorney James Hall for drafting of the necessary ordinance.

Request for refund on 1952 business license by Gertrude O. "Boots" Bailey, who formerly operated a real estate office at 2165 Torrance Blvd., was granted. Mrs. Bailey explained that she was joining her husband in Alaska.

Request for establishment of a license fee for a "Stock Auction" to be conducted at 3745 W. 100th St. was referred to Wednesday's agenda meeting of the Council.

Recommendation of George Stevens that the salary of City Atty. James Hall be increased $50 a month because of the increased legal work involved in setting up and operating the Municipal Water District was approved by the council.

Recommendation of Stevens that the property at the southwest corner of Carson St. and Crenshaw Blvd. be purchased for $15,000 from John Miller, Richard Miller, and H. P. Bolas, a limited partnership, was approved. The lot will be the new site of the Torrance Fire Department.

City Manager George Stevens recommended that the City contribute $75 toward a full page advertisement on the program booklet of the Junior Chamber of Commerce State Convention to be hosted by the Torrance and adjacent area clubs at Catalina in May. The council approved the recommendation.

Mayor Bob Haggard's motion that the City Manager, through the engineering department, make a survey of the probable cost of putting sidewalks along the main arteries of the city was approved.

The South Bay long distance deal was part of a hit-and-run protest tactic which took place up and down the coast from Santa Maria to Redondo Beach. Outcome of the Santa Maria negotiations will decide whether further walkouts will take place, it was stated.

NICKEL SOURCE Nickel is distributed widely but in only a few localities is mineralization sufficiently concentrated to constitute ore bodies.

El Camino College transfers upon graduation from high school and were not eligible to attend the university were above the average of other junior college transfers in the same category after making up those deficiencies at El Camino and moving to the university.

In considering all of the transfers from El Camino to the university it was found that the grade average for the local transfers was equal to that of all state junior colleges.

The local college president was also informed that El Camino transfers made higher grades after one semester at the university than did those students who had taken their freshman and sophomore work there.

The information was issued in a bulletin from Grace Blvd., Office of Relations with Schools, University of California at Berkeley.

Annual Red Shield Drive To Open Here April 6-12

With spring cleaning time at hand, the Salvation Army Salvage Week Committee is urging Torrance residents to think of the familiar Red Shield truck in disposing of throw-away articles.

Plans for the annual salvage drive, to be conducted in the Torrance area April 6 to 12, are being made by a committee headed by Chairman J. Hugh Sherfy Jr.

During the weeklong campaign, a special fleet of Red Shield trucks from the Salvation Army Social Service Center which serves this area will call at Torrance homes and offices to collect castoff items.

Brigadier Ranson D. Gifford, manager of the center, pointed out that discarded articles provide the only means to continue the Salvation Army's program of social rehabilitation.

"Discards donated last year and reconditioned in the social center's workshops provided 235,000 hours of occupational therapy for needy and handicapped men," he said. "In addition, the center served 55,380 wholesome meals, furnished 20,145 warm beds and provided a financial lift to those in need."

The Salvation Army leader asked local residents to telephone Torrance 3634 to bring a Red Shield truck to pick up discards.

He said the center has continuing need for used clothing, shoes, furniture, bedding, dishes, electrical appliances, rugs, rags, radios, stoves, and miscellaneous articles.

'Round the Riviera

I feel like the man who went to join her three sisters. out to dig a well and brought. Arlis "Tex" Wyatt and his in an oil gusher. I didn't know wife Pat, 309 Calle de Andaluca, so much could happen so quick, have bricks and a wheelbarrow. But thanks to the many, many scattered all over the front yard persons who have called me to comment on this column. What else can I say but that I appreciate it very much and the only other word that helps to cover it is "encouraging." Thanks again.

The United Mothers Association of Hollywood Riviera knows how I felt last Wednesday. Jill was over the mumps and went back to school with her doctor's release pinned tightly to her coat. The school nurse brought her home an hour later. Seems that they just couldn't let Jill's daughter come back to school; she had what appeared to be a contagious infection on her upper lip. My daughter and I were both heartbroken; she because she wanted to stay and play with her schoolmates and I because more treatment and penicillin ointment was the prescription. Today as I write this column the infection is disappearing, but my husband is in bed nursing with the flu. Now I know what old son of Jim and Margery my grandmother meant when she talked about the spring miseries.

Can anyone think of anything more warming than a father-and-daughter box social? Troop 59, the Hollywood Riviera Girl Scouts sponsored by Las Vegas, had such a social Sunday, March 16, at El Retiro Park. For the enjoyment of their fathers and the gaining of merit badges, the girls produced the play, "The Ugly Queen," under the direction of Mrs. Pat Wyatt and Nancy Ruth Miller, daughter of Mrs. Henry Miller.

The part of the Ugly Queen was played by identical twins Beverly and Barbara Brandt, who had to perform identical movements in the mirror sequences. Also appearing in the play were Girl Scouts Jill Aber, Jean Key, Nancy Goggins, Marilyn Linscott and Dyanne Demarce. They'll give the play again tonight at 8 p. m. at the Woman's Club in Redondo Beach.

Consider, if you will, the care and troubles involved in watching over the health of just one family of children. Let's suppose a little father, and make the old woman in the shoe a pitter. Suppose we had to watch the health of 800 children—what a job that would be. Yet the "forgotten" woman at Seaside School does just that. She's School Nurse Flora Marris and she deserves a real big "thank you" for the good work she does in watching over 800 children while they're in school. She keeps a sharp eye out for contagious infections and diseases; she administers first aid to any child hurt at school; she performs the regular duties of a registered nurse. She needs all the experience she's gained through the five years she's worked at the Beverly Hills Emergency Hospital and the seven years she spent in the Hermosa Beach Schools before coming here. And after she takes care of our 800 children, just to top it all off, she has to watch over 500 more kids at the Walteria School.

Up hill and down dale: Chief Warrant Officer John W. Reed, U. S. Navy, of 138 Via Alameda, is en route to Far Eastern operations aboard the cruiser USS Bremerton... his wife, Nan, heard from him this week when he wrote from Honolulu, where the ship is receiving alterations. Larry Stout, 5-year-old son of Bill and Maxine Stout, 122 Vista Del Parque, was another young victim of that cheek-puffing malady, the mumps... he returned to school this week. Add two more little souls to your H. R. census. The first, John A. Walter, 7 pounds 7 ounces, was born to Mr. and Mrs. Bud Van Bornum of 127 Pasco De Gracia... he came home to keep company with his sister, 3-year-old Mary Ann. The second, Nita Louise, 6 pounds 14 ounces, was born to Judge and Mrs. John A. Shider of 317 Camino School tomorrow, Saturday and de las Colinas, came home to Sunday.

Six Hollywood Riviera citizens will appear before the public this coming week-end. They are Paul Bennett, 713 Calle de Arboles; Dick Bonham, 221 Via Buena Ventura; Lois and Ray Borman, 713 Calle de Arboles; Arthur and Lora Lytle, 825 Calle de Arboles. They'll all appear at the Redondo Beach High School tomorrow, Saturday and de las Colinas, came home to Sunday.

Medic's Bottles Bottle Up Works For GI Non-Coms A Torrance 40th Division medic got his bottles mixed up recently—and it hurt, according to The Bulldozer, official publication of the 578th Combat Engineers now in Korea.

Sgt. Jack R. Garland, attached to the 2nd Platoon, C Company, was the mixed-up medic and M/Sgt. Thomas Harrington of Los Angeles and Cpl. Lester Robinson of Lennox the victims of the twist.

Harrington was given a bottle of benzoin (liniment for external use) for his cough, while the corporal received a bottle of Brown's mixture (cough syrup) to use for treating a skin infection.

"Both men have recovered. The Bulldozer reported, but the patients have lost complete faith in Garland and his pals in the Medics.

The Bulldozer writer concluded: "Thinking of the medics has given me a headache; I think I'll go over to Garland's tent and get a can of foot-powder to ease the pain."
