UCLA Extension Courses Ready

University of California Extension, the adult education division of the state university, will open more than 400 day-time and evening classes this fall in 29 Southern California communities, according to Paul H. Sheats, associate director.

Main classroom centers and information facilities for University Extension are located at UCLA (RRadshaw 2-6161) and at 813 So. Hill St., Los Angeles (TUcker 6123). Additional community classes are being offered in Torrance and a number of other Southland cities.

Available for registration during the semester starting Sept. 15 will be classes in art, business administration, engineering, education, history, science, languages, theater arts, English, political science, and many other courses.

Fall catalogues will be sent without charge on request to the classroom centers.

Adult School Opening Set For Sept. 22

A wide variety of courses is being offered this year by the Adult Education Division of the Torrance Unified School District with classes slated to start September 22, according to Vernon Sheblak, new director of Adult Education.

Classes offered include the following: Leather and metal crafts, ceramics, textile painting; shorthand, typing; cake decorating, dressmaking and tailoring, lampshades, rugmaking, knitting, parent education; machine and wood shop; physical fitness for men and women, social dance, square dancing and upholstery. Music Minded Thief Takes Items to Wear

While he was away on vacation, a thief entered his home and made off with a two-piece suit, a guitar, a pair of slacks and 48 phonograph records. Ed Longacre, of 1544 El Prado told Torrance police.

Records were located in a trailer at a 190th St. lot and officers are still looking for trailer owner.

Vandals Smash School

Thirty-two windows were smashed, presumably by young vandals at the Crenshaw School, 18603 Crenshaw Blvd. over the week-end, police reports show. A neighbor told officers he saw four boys on "stripped" down bikes leaving the scene.
