Honeymooning James Gateses To Live Here After Feb. 15

Honeymooning at Furnace Creek Inn, Death Valley, this week are the former Miss Zeldia Yvonne Bourne, daughter of the William E. Bourne, 1453 W. 216th St., and her husband, James Alton Gates Jr., son of the senior Gates, 1626 Crenshaw Blvd.

The young couple, who exchanged rings and vows at ceremonies in the First Baptist Church here last Sunday, will be at home, 2355 Torrance Blvd., after Feb. 15.

When she became Mrs. Gates, Miss Bourne was wearing a Chantilly lace over white orlon satin gown styled with fitted bodice closed in back with tiny buttons to the waist. Dainty seed pearls added elegance to the high neckline, and similar jewels formed the tiara which held her circular illusion net veil, bordered with Chantilly lace, in place.

The long cascade train was gracefully arranged by the bride's aunt, Mrs. Wallace Flewelling, and the bridal bouquet was formed of a purple-throated white orchid surrounded by white gardenias and delicate Stephanotis blossoms.

Costumes in the bridal entourage centered around deep winter colors, with Miss Annell Walker, maid of honor, gowned in purple net over taffeta, the bridesmaids, Mrs. Edward Greenwood in coral net over taffeta and Miss Donna Friedman in royal blue net over taffeta.

Each girl carried a prayer book bouquet of Talsman roses and wore a headpiece to match. Kathy Schaffer, friend of both families, attended as flower girl in a white nylon sheet over taffeta trimmed with Chantilly lace to match the wedding gown. White gardenias formed her headpiece.

In honor position as best man was Herbert Dimon, while Ronald Gates, brother of the groom, and William D. Bourne, brother of the bride, seated the more than 250 guests in pews decorated with long tapers, white mums, white bells, and ribbon.

Johnny A. Flewelling, cousin of the bride, served as ring bearer.

While the bride and groom knelt at an altar beautified by tall baskets of white gladioli, mums, and large phalaenodion.

Wedding guests gathered at the YWCA to congratulate the new pair, Mrs. Wendell Walker, cousin of the bride, cut the four-tiered wedding cake, while presiding at the crystal punch bowl was Mrs. Jack Flewelling, also a cousin of the bride. Assisting at both tables was Mrs. Don Stevens.

Mrs. Rose Wooster secured signatures of guests, while Mesdames Forest G. Cecil and Martha Campbell assisted at the gift table.

Following the formal reception, the bride's parents opened their home to the bridal party and relatives of both families for a buffet turkey dinner.

Both bride and groom are graduates of Torrance High School. He is currently studying at El Camino College and is employed at Torrance National Bank; she is employed at the telephone company in Los Angeles.
