Fruit Trees Plentiful For Orchards

Home orchards are doubly satisfying experiences for California gardeners for the fruit tree is a thing of beauty for the garden or yard and a source of eating pleasure as well.

Newcomers in the pleasure-giving fruit tree family are the Gold Dust Peach and the Burmosa Plum, announces the California Association of Nurserymen. The Gold Dust Peach tree is an early bearing freestone. Burmosa plum was developed by the University of California and is also an early bearer with creamy amber flesh and yellow skin. It's freestone.

Economy of California Wines Seldom Realized

According to a recent study made by Elmo Roper and Associates, nation's largest opinion research firm, Americans do not realize how economical California Wines actually are. This point is being emphasized by at least one major producer of California wines, the California Wine Association. This association produces the award winning Eleven Cellars wines, which sell here for 58 cents a fifth for dry wines, 63 cents for sweet.

According to Mario Perelli-Minetti, general manager of the California Wine Assn. "When winners of the quality of Eleven Cellars are bought for what amounts to pocket change, all Americans should be made aware of it. Wine adds to life's enjoyment, and Eleven Cellars should make wine a part of everyone's daily activities."

The Roper Survey, which was sponsored by the California Wine Advisory Board, indicated another obstacle to more general wine enjoyment. Most Americans, it was disclosed, "just don't think of" wine often enough. Consequently, the Eleven Cellars people are working to make Eleven Cellars wine a "top of the mind" item with shoppers in local grocery and liquor stores.

The Eleven Cellars wines have been brought to the attention of the people of this area through a series of advertisements in this newspaper captioned, "If I won $64,000 . . . I'd still go for Eleven Cellars at 63c."

Perelli-Minetti points out that California Wine is just as American as beer and fits the everyday life of the American family. The association head also stated that price means little without quality. The quality of Eleven Cellars wine was proven again this year at the Los Angeles County Fair and the California State Fair. At these wine judgments, Eleven Cellars won more awards than any other
