

Air Force Seeks To Enlist Women For WAF Duties

Opportunities for advanced education and job training for young women graduates of high school are featured in the Air Force program for those qualified to enlist and serve as WAF (women in the Air Force).

"WAF acquire training and experience while receiving full pay as members of the Air Force. They live in college-like dormitories, wear stylish uniforms and have enjoyable companions," said Staff Sergeant Leland "Lee" Mason, recruiting sergeant for the Torrance area.

Air Force on-the-job and technical school training qualify WAF enlistees for interesting and valuable work in one of 30 different types of occupations. During their training these young women earn full pay and allowances, credit for promotion, and have opportunities for travel and recreation.

High school graduates between 18 and 34, who are in good physical condition are eligible to apply for enlistment as women in the Air Force. Hometown girls joining together will attend basic training together at Lackland Air Force Base, San Antonio, Texas.

Young Women of the Torrance area interested in comparing the qualifications and benefits of the WAF may obtain further details by contacting Sergeant Mason in Room 207, Post Office Building, San Pedro or phone TE 2-2522.
