Protect Children Playing In Backyard This Summer

Of course you want your sharp knife. Fill up the space yard to be a safe place for your children and their friends to play this summer. Yard safety, like safety within the home, is largely a matter of spotting and eliminating accident hazards before accidents can occur.

If the ropes of the swing are frayed, don't take a chance that they will last through the summer. They may, but if they don't the result can be a bad fall. If the swing hangs from the branch of a tree, make sure the branch is free of cracks or rot.

Check Splinters
 Check for splinters the outdoors gym, the slide, the saw, and sandbox. Any splinters that you find should be cut off at the base with a chisel or with plastic wood and sand it smooth when hard.

Replace any cracked or broken rungs or boards. A cracked rung, like a frayed rope, may last through the season, but again you don't want to take the chance. Protruding bolts or nuts with sharp edges can inflict a nasty wound. Cover them with rounded knobs of Plastic Wood, sanded smooth.

Rake the sand in the sandbox from time to time to rid it of stones or broken-off pieces of metal toys. Keep a sharp eye open for boxes or boards with protruding nails. Remove clothes line when not in use, or make sure it hangs high enough so that it can't catch a running child.
