first husband was more of a man than this one will ever be. I shouldn't have divorced him. I'm miserable and heart-sick. What shall I do?—M.M.M.

Dear M.M.M.: This problem should be discussed with your clergyman. Sounds like you jumped from the frying pan into the fire. Maybe with luck you can get back into the frying pan.

Dear Ann: I'm 16 and madly in love with a boy 18 who works at the gasoline station near my house. We used to go steady, but he dropped me.

The reason he dropped me is I got mad at him for standing me up on dates. Four times in a row he promised to take me to a certain movie and he didn't show up or call to say he wasn't coming.

Now I hear he's dating a girl who looks very much like me. Everyone comments on this. Do you think this means anything? Shall I call him? I think he still cares about me but he's stubborn.—DOT

Dear Dot: Quit puffing on that dream pipe. If he wanted you he wouldn't have had to settle for a substitute. Forget him. He's a heel.

Robin Markham Family Packs For Five Year Stay in Angola, Africa. If you think you have troubles packing the kids off for two weeks at camp, imagine getting four little girls ready for five years in Africa. That's the problem of Mr. and Mrs. Robin Markham, Congregational Christian missionaries under the American board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, who left this week on a month-long voyage daughters, Vicky, 7; Nan Joan, 5; and twins Cheryl Jamba and Chela Jueve, 2. The Markhams have been on furlough for the past year in the U. S. They have served one other five-year term of service in Africa. Robin Markham is the son of Dr. and Mrs. H. Veazie Markham, 23317 Hawthorne Blvd. He has two sisters, Mrs. Dorothy Allin of Los Angeles, whose husband, Rev. Gerald Allin is a Presbyterian minister and Mrs. Robert Nikkels of Oakland. The Markhams visited here for several months last summer upon their return from Africa. After completing their semester at Ames, the family returned to Torrance at Eastertime for a several weeks visit with the Markham family. They have 35 pieces of luggage, half of which was packed in their families' homes in California and Illinois and will not reach them for six months. Pretty five-foot tall Frances Markham, 35, is unruffled by the whole thing. Her husband is in charge of industrial and trade work at the Currie Institute at Dondi. Frances, who is both a registered nurse and teacher, helps out when she can teaching English at the Institute and teaching from time to time at the school for American and Canadian missionary children at Dondi. Five Christmases In addition to packing enough clothes for a family of six for five years, Mrs. Markham must do her Christmas shopping five years in advance. She must make allowances for the children's being older each year, which means choosing presents which two-year-old Cheryl will want when she is seven and five-year-old Nan Jean will want when she is ten.

She must remember toys not only for her own children, but Christmas and birthday toys as well for the other children at the mission station. "Toys are particularly hard to get there," said Mrs. Markham. "You can't just go to the corner drug store."

Another problem is buying dresses five sizes too large for Vicky. Vicky will be 13 when the Markhams return to the U.S. for their next furlough. "I gave up on shoes," she said. She will depend on African shoemakers for open sandals for the children.

On High Seas The Markhams left Monday, June 29, from Montreal, Canada, aboard the Greek Liner Arkadia for London and then Antwerp. The next stop will be Lobito, a port in Angola, and then they will travel 250 miles by train, reaching their station early in August.

"It's fun when some of the trunks, which have been six months en route, arrive," said Mrs. Markham. "It's like Christmas, unpacking all the things you had almost forgotten about."

On hand at Dondi to welcome the Markhams will be Bozo, their enormous dog, half Rhodesian ridgeback and half boxer. Last year when the Markhams came home, Bozo was left with a Portuguese family. Vicky and Nan Jean worried that he wouldn't understand being spoken to in Portuguese. Now, said Mrs. Markham, they are worried he won't understand their English.

The Markham youngsters and their African playmates speak Portuguese together.

Donkey Promise Robin and Frances Markham have arranged for the children to have a donkey when they get back to Africa. The children have already named it—"Howdy Doody" after the TV program.

The blonde twins, who are known by their African names, Jamba and Jueve, were born in Angola. All twins among the Ovimbundu people are given the same names. Jamba is the name for a first-born twin, boy or girl. Gueve is the second born twin, if a girl. A boy would be named Hossi. These names come from animals. Ojamba is an elephant; gueve a hippo, and ohoosi a lion.

In 1953 the Markhams were commissioned career missionaries of the American Board. The First Congregational Church of Long Beach, Calif., held a commissioning service for them and the Congregational Church of Sandwich held a recognition service.

After a year studying Portuguese at Lisbon and learning the Umbundu language in Africa, Mr. Markham was assigned to the Currie Institute where 300 Africans, most of them boys between 15 and 20, come from all over Angola to get special training and go back home to become leaders in their communities.
