Must Know People to Write Successfully, Novelist Says

"Nothing that happens matters unless it happens to a human being," novelist Leonard Wibberley told South-west Manuscripters at their meeting Friday night in the Clark Stadium Community Building, 861 Valley Drive, Hermosa Beach.

Wibberley, versatile Hermosa Beach author of 30 books, spoke on "Writing the Novel." He urged beginning novelists to bring abstract ideas down to the personal level of their effect on individuals. He cited as a fine example the trained novelist who hears nearly 90 per cent of the conversation around him, as opposed to the non-writer who hears only about 10 per cent of what is said.

The guest speaker said that the novel-length provides the writer with the freest, most unconfined form of writing there is, barring poetry. "There is no set audience for any particular novel. In writing the short-story, you must conform to a pattern. But the publishing business is completely open on the subject
