Major Tasks Outlined for State Legislature As 1961 Term Opens

By VINCENT THOMAS
Assemblyman, 68th District

By the time you read this, calendar pages will have been flipped for the first few days of our 1961 season. A few bills have been introduced, but the big bulk of the thousands of measures expected will not hit the hopper until later on.

Like our 1959 regular session, which was the first under revised constitutional provisions, the tempo of our operations will be set by the requirement that a 30 day period elapse between introduction of a bill and final action on it. This means that our first few weeks will be devoted primarily to bill drafting and introductions. The several interim committees will also be readying their reports and recommendations.

THE MAJOR tasks which will confront us are already pretty well defined. From here it seems probable that the session will be a very busy one, sometimes controversial, sometimes dramatic. All of us caught up in its workings, and that includes the many spokesmen for various segments of the great public, will find it intensely absorbing.

The first big job before us is the state budget for fiscal year 1961-62. Its size has already been estimated at $2.7 billion, slightly over the one for the current year. It will be submitted to us before the end of January, but final action will probably not occur until the closing days of the session in June. This year a new wrinkle in budgeting will appear.

THE DEPARTMENT of finance, instead of asking the various state agencies to submit their requests, has estimated the size of revenues available, then divided the total among them, and advised them to cut their demands to fit. Just how this will work out remains to be seen. Many are predicting that this will increase pressures on our legislative budget committees.

Taxation ties in logically with budgets. The state administration has indicated it will not request new taxes, but the Senate committee on transportation and public utilities will sponsor a bill to raise the "in lieu" tax on autos some $66 million per year, to be used for local roads. Prospects for eliminating the sales tax on drugs, or for bringing the state income tax more in line with the federal, seem less bright, due to the slump in sales tax revenues.

ONE SUBJECT which is sure to make every politician tingle, is reapportionment. Following every census, it is our responsibility to redivide the 80 Assembly districts, to give equitable Congressional districts to include the eight new seats to which California is now entitled.

Matters educational will require a large amount of our attention. The split between those who favor greater emphasis on basic subjects and those who like "progressive education" will certainly make itself apparent in our deliberations. The dire need for more school building funds, and the proposal for county-wide school tax levies to aid poorer districts are also matters deserving serious thought.

NO SESSION will be complete unless our water problem is again brought to the boil. The big $1.75 billion water bond issue has been approved, but contract provisions with water users will no doubt create hours of debate.

Proposals relating to farm labor will stir up plenty of dust. The labor disputes last summer have not been forgotten, and both sides give indications that the problems will be really tough to solve.

Matters relating to youth will be prominent on our agenda. Better protection against the narcotics evil, more equitable treatment for minors in judicial or custodial cases, and improvement in aid to needy children will all get study and action.
