

Protection for Seamen

Since the American Revolution, the law has given our seamen special protection. For a story of these bad working conditions, uncertain wages, and abuse, read Dana's Two Years Before the Mast, a colorful account of adventure and cruelty.

It had a great influence on Congress.

Seamen are wards of the U. S. admiralty courts. (Admiralty, from the Arabic word "ruler of the sea.")

Take seamen's wages. Any seaman who does not get paid within ten days after his wages are due may have a federal judge or marshal help him collect them. For non-payment of wages, seamen can tie up ships, keeping them from sailing. The ship's master must come in to court and tell why he has not paid his crew.

As everybody knows, seamen need some money in port. And so the law calls for them to get half the wages due when they dock any place in the world.

No court can attach a seaman's wages. Creditors cannot collect their debts out of seamen's wages. Only support.

International agreements wife or children are subject to collection proceedings out of his wages.

International agreements call for payment of sickness, injury, or death benefits to seamen. Congress has also set up a seamen's federal workmen's compensation program for injury on the job. Seamen have a right to work on a seaworthy ship.

APPLICATION FOR LICENSE
(No. 17 in a Series)

One of the more common forms of public notice, or legal advertising, has to do with applications for licenses of one sort or another. Applications for marriage licenses are an exception since they are purely personal and are carried usually as routine news.

But the laws of the various states specify various situations in which licenses dispensed by some public agency be applied for. Not only must application be made in proper form but a further requirement is a provision of the law for publication of a notice of the application in a bona fide newspaper of general circulation. To give only two examples, such an application might be for a so-called liquor license or to qualify as a security salesman.

Such notices are basically in the public interest. They are partly a matter of public record and to comply with one phase of the law, but they are also a means of putting the public on notice, thus safeguarding the rights of others. These might include possible competitors or others with a proper interest in such matters.

In any case, it is significant that the law invariably requires such publication to be made in a bona fide newspaper. This, too, is in the public interest since it insures maximum coverage and effectiveness.
