Violations of Right of Way Accident Cause

Right of way violations are second only to excessive speed as the leading cause of traffic accidents, Bradford M. Crittenden, Commissioner of the California Highway Patrol, declared in urging all motorists to be prepared to yield the right of way to the other driver in order to prevent a collision.

"A good rule to follow is to never insist on taking the right of way, even when you are sure it is legally yours," Crittenden continued. "Being prepared and willing to yield instead of taking the right of way is the mark of a safe, courteous driver and stricter adherence to this principal would reduce the frequency of intersection accidents."

RIGHT OF WAY situations occur most frequently when two or more automobiles approach an intersection at approximately the same time. At intersections without traffic control devices such as a stop or yield signs or traffic signals, the first vehicle in the intersection has the right of way. But when two cars enter the intersection at the same time, the driver of the vehicle on the left must yield the right of way to the vehicle on the right.

Crittenden said that drivers approaching a "stop" sign must stop and let any cars that are within the approaching intersection, or approaching so closely as to be an immediate hazard, pass before entering the through highway.

DRIVERS APPROACHING a "yield" sign must slow, and stop if necessary, to allow closely approaching vehicle to go through the intersection first. Observing that many fatal accidents result from improper left turns, Crittenden declared "the driver intending to turn left must yield the right of way to any vehicle approaching from the opposite direction which is so close as to constitute a hazard at any time during the turning movement. But, having so yielded and given the proper signal, he may turn left and the drivers approaching from the opposite direction must yield the right of way."

Garden Checklist

1. Set out new hibiscus plants in a warm, protected spot. You'll get a bountiful crop of blooms all through summer, fall and early winter.
2. Now that the first period of growth is over, June is a good month to trim evergreen. The ideal is to keep their natural habit of growth intact by pruning to laterals, etc.
3. Protect lovely June blooming roses by spraying or dusting at the first sign of trouble. With improvements in equipment, sprays and dusts, it is comparatively easy to have clean, healthy looking plants and flowers.
4. Guy newly set trees so that they don't sway with every breeze. Run a cord or wire through an old garden hose so it won't damage the tree, then tie it to a stake. This prevents root damage while trees are getting established.
5. This is an excellent time to aerate your lawn—making for more effective watering. Available at many C.A.N. nurseries are water spiking devices with which the aeration holes may easily be punctured. For best results, fill holes with mixture of peat moss, steer manure, sand or similar materials.
