

Area Artifacts Now Displayed On Campus

Artifacts from the Milo S. Moore archeological collection will be on display in the Harbor College library from now to June 16, according to faculty curator Patricia Merriam, college geology instructor.

The library is open Mondays through Fridays from 8 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. and the public is cordially invited to visit the college and view the exhibit.

Shell hair ornaments, mortars and pestles, shell beads, stone points and blades, trade beads, and abalone shell fish-hooks are among the pieces on display.

All the artifacts in the exhibit come from the Malaga Cove area of the Palos Verdes hills and represent a time span from 1000 B.C. through the sixteenth century.

At the time of contact between the Indians and the early Spanish explorers in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, there was an Indian village called Chowinga in the Malaga Cove area, Mrs. Merriam said.

The artifacts have been taken from the 600-piece archeological collection donated to the college last February by Milo S. Moore, distinguished California educator, for the purpose of stimulating the interest of students and the public in anthropology.

Third El Camino Chemistry Prof In Science Post

With the appointment of Lester Smith to the Emory University Institute for College Chemistry Teachers, the El Camino College chemistry department will be represented at each of the three National Science Foundation-sponsored college chemistry institutes this summer. Smith will attend Emory University in Atlanta, Ga., from June 12 to Aug. 11.

Smith has been a member of the El Camino College chemistry faculty for the last two years. He has been primarily concerned with the chemistry course for non-science majors and has represented the chemistry department on the physical science survey teaching staff. In addition, he has also taught the beginning chemistry course.

THE EMORY Institute is of particular significance to the chemistry for non-science majors program because it offers a unified program presenting recent advances of fundamental significance in the major fields of chemistry. The program is not designed for the specialist but will feature authoritative presentations by lecture and demonstration in the major divisions of chemistry.

One week will be devoted to each of the following topics: analytical chemistry, atomic and molecular structure, bonding of organic molecules, molecular spectroscopy, physical chemistry, biochemistry, radiochemistry, theoretical organic and polymer chemistry.

LECTURES and demonstrations will be supplemented by participation in seminars, field trips, laboratory work and informal discussions of college chemistry teaching.

Smith received his bachelor's degree from Pepperdine in 1950 and his master's degree from Long Beach State in 1959. He has also studied at UCLA. Prior to joining the faculty at El Camino College, he served for six years as a member of the chemistry faculty and chairman of the division of science and mathematics at Taft Junior College. He also taught for two years at Chino High School.

Half of School Enrollment on Tap for Summer

Nearly half of the eligible children now in Torrance Schools have signed up for six-week summer sessions, from June 26 through Aug. 4, according to a report to the Board of Education.

Sign-ups so far total 11,552, with 8200 elementary and 3352 high school students. Of the high school students, 1478 are eighth graders who will get a head start during the summer.

Sign-ups this year are more than 2000 higher than last year, although normally, some of those who sign up do not attend.
