Too Many Students Leave School Early

By REYNOLDS KNIGHT

With the need for trained personnel more acute than ever in view of the advancing technological age, it appears that America is not getting the most from its youthful population.

Not only does it pose a problem from the standpoint of utilizing our available manpower; it has become a dangerous social situation, according to some of our leading government officials.

A major problem apparently is the large number of students who are leaving school before they receive their education. Statistics now point to the fact that about 2.5 million of the 10.8 million students now enrolled in public and private schools beneath the college level quit school before graduation. And laws in many states permit them to leave school before the age of 16.

ALTHOUGH the number of drop-outs is not rising perceptibly, the advent of automation and space age is lifting job requirements, making it more difficult for untrained people to earn a living.

Emphasis now among some educators is placed on keeping teen-agers in school until high school graduation and in bolstering instruction in sciences, languages and vocational training for those obviously not destined for college.

SCHOOL VANDALISM — Electronic wizardry is being used to an increasing extent to combat the costly problem of vandalism in our nation's schools. John E. Haines, Minneapolis-Honeywell vice president, says many school officials are turning to electronic security systems to protect buildings during non-class hours.

An indication of the staggering losses being inflicted by intruders is the fact that vandalism costs nearly $400,000 a year in Chicago schools and in Baltimore more than $80,000 is spent annually just to replace broken glass.

Haines, whose firm is a leading manufacturer of electronic security equipment, says that among the more sophisticated devices now being used to detect intruders are electronic fences and noise and sound detectors. One type of electronic fence is Honeywell's recently introduced taut wire system that can be run around a school, a room or an object. It automatically turns in an alarm when anyone touches or cuts it.

THE FIRM'S electronic noise detection system consists of a number of combination microphone-speaker units located in key places throughout the school. When it "hears" something unusual — a window breaking, footsteps, drills — it automatically turns in an alarm at a control panel in the custodian's office. He then flips a switch to listen in on that area to determine the cause of the disturbance.

NEW COST CUTTER—One major aviation company that builds fighter-bomber planes for the military has saved virtually millions of dollars for the government through such cost-cutting methods as internal cost reduction techniques, improved purchasing methods, value engineering and control of overhead and labor savings.

This same firm now comes up with a new $180,000 chemical milling facility to produce high-strength, lightweight aluminum parts for the F-105-D all-weather fighter-bomber. Spokesmen for Republic Aviation Corp., the builder, say the new facility will help in its program to shave approximately a million dollars from the cost of each aircraft from the fiscal year 1959 through 1962.

Chemical milling is a process that removes metal from a part in any size, shape, or form desired by a controlled chemical reaction. The installation not only is expected to save the company some $125,000 a year, but it will play an important role in Republic's on-site capability for future production of advanced aircraft and space systems.

THINGS TO COME—A new table-side electric food warming tray with an antique brass-plated steel base and scratch resistant, brush-finished aluminum heating surface, may be plugged into any outlet. Unbreakable, it heats in seconds . . . A handle-like device that attaches to a bowling ball by means of vacuum cups is said to correct delivery faults, improve timing and footwork, and to make it possible to deliver straight, curve or back-up balls with considerable skill . . . An automatic water cooler that fits under the kitchen sink works on the same principle as a refrigerator, keeping water at 40 degrees . . . A disposable pill cup for hospitals is lightweight and inexpensive. It has either a snap-in, pull tab paper lid, or one with an extension card for noting the patient's name and time for medication.

FARM OUTLOOK — Farm income is expected to level off next year following this year's sharp increase, farm specialist forecast last week at a meeting in Washington. Predictions are that net income will be close to this year's $12.7 billion, and 1961 figures may show a $1 billion rise from last year. Farm costs are expected to continue the upward climb; bigger feed bills look likely. Some prices will be boosted by lower production or higher price supports. Reduced overall marketings, however, will tend to offset the gain.

"The list of the 10 greatest engineers of all time selected by the deans of American colleges of engineering signally fails to include Casey Jones." — John W. Richards, Pageant (S. C.) Journal.
