YOUR PROBLEMS

by Ann Landers

"How to Go About Kissing a Girl, Age-Old Problem"

Dear Ann Landers: I was amused at the letter from the young man who didn't know how to go about kissing a girl.

It seems this is an age-old problem. I ran across a copy of the Louisiana Advance, published in Arcadia on Aug. 16, 1889. The article was entitled "How Girls Want To Be Kissed." It certainly proves that human nature hasn't changed much in the past 73 years. A young woman wrote:

"I am getting tired of having my hats destroyed, my hair upset and my corsages torn to pieces by beginners. If the dear boys were told how to go about kissing their girls perhaps they would not make such a mess of it."

"It is not necessary, young man, to grab your girl as if she had just stolen a pocket-book. There is no necessity to clutch at her dress for dear life, or pull her head forward with such intensity that her eyes are endangered by scarf pins or long pencils protruding from upper vest pockets."

"Bear in mind, young man, the girl is not trying to get away. She has the same aim as you. Curve your arm around her waist and turn her toward you. Place your free arm around her shoulder and give her a gentle and soulful caress. Then let nature do her work."

Dear Ann Landers: I've played cards with the same group of women for years. The current game is Canasta. It's a friendly game, but we play for fairly high stakes. Over a period of time, large sums of money have changed hands.

Recently I went away on a vacation and I asked a woman who is new in town to substitute for me. She's an excellent card player and gave me quite an earful when I returned.

She told me that Mrs. X cheated and then she proceeded to tell me exactly how she did it. I was shocked. Mrs. X has been playing with our group for many years. She's been fantastically lucky. She rarely loses, and then only small amounts.

Now, Ann, what shall I do about it? Would it be best to say nothing and just drop out of the group? Or shall I tell the others what's been going on?—FLABBER GAST-ED

Dear Flabber: Say nothing for the time being. Play with the group as usual and keep your eye on Mrs. X. Since you've been clued in, it shouldn't be difficult to determine for yourself if she is cheating.

If she is, go to her privately and tell her you are aware of what she has been doing. Let her know you're willing to give her a chance to go straight. If after this warning she cheats again, stop her dead in her tracks and expose her to one and all.

Dear Ann Landers: I'll make it brief and to the point. Why in heaven's name would a beautifully educated fellow (also attractive and from a good family) marry a girl who is stupid, ignorant, and totally incapable of carrying on an intelligent conversation?

Thank you for enlightening me if you can.—BAFFLED

Dear Baffled: I guess this beautifully educated fellow is interested in other things besides intelligent conversation.
