YOUR PROBLEMS

by Ann Landers

"She Has Chosen The Late Shift"

Dear Ann Landers: Our daughter, Shirley, is 21 years old. She lives at home and we all get along fairly well. I'm writing about a problem which may seem peculiar but we need an answer.

Shirley took a special course after she graduated from high school because she wanted to be a secretary. She has quit three office jobs, all with fine companies, because she claims she can't get up in the morning no matter how hard she tries.

Her present job is waiting on tables in a cocktail lounge from 5 p.m. until 1 a.m. She says she's much happier. Her father insists she could get up in the morning if she wanted to, and he cites as an example the fact that she got up for twelve years to go to school. He thinks she prefers waitress work because the social life is better. How about this? — LOOKING FOR THE TRUTH

Dear Looking: Your daughter got up in the morning to go to school because school was compulsory. Now that she has a choice she has chosen the late shift.

Some individuals are day people, others are night people. If Shirley feels better sleeping mornings and working nights, leave her be. It's the girls who want to sleep mornings and not work at all that I'm concerned about.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I have been married 29 years. We have a lovely daughter.

When we were newlyweds, we figured out our budget according to his pay check. He gave me $10 a week for groceries. Well, his pay check has doubled in the past 20 years and the price of living has gone up plenty, but I'm still getting $10 a week for groceries.

Last night we were out with some friends and he picked up the check for cocktails. The bill was $9.80. My big shot husband left a $4 tip. My blood pressure must have shot up 50 points. I asked him when we got home why he did that and he said "Because it makes me feel good." I told him that now that HE feels good, he should make ME feel good by increasing my allowance for groceries. Please print this in the paper and add a few salty remarks. It may help — SCRIMPING WIFE

Dear Scrimping: If you can feed a family of three on $10 a week you're entitled to membership in the magician's union.

Your husband should give you at least $20 a week for (Continued on Page 8)
