Scherick's School To Open Wednesday

Scherich's South Bay School, 1108 Tullita, Redondo Beach, starts its third year on Sept. 5. This school was established by Warren H. Scherich, M.A., to provide private schooling for children with learning problems. Small classes, tutoring, speed reading, and remedial reading were a part of the original school which now has been expanded to include testing and evening classes where high school students can get help.

Scherich's South Bay School is unique because of the very small classes, and highly specialized teaching techniques. The largest class is one teacher for six students. The program made by some of the pupils has been four years growth in one year. The special audio-kinesthetic-visual methods of teaching and the one-to-one relationship are the main reasons for such growth, Scherich said.

WHEN A CHILD with normal intelligence is not adjusting to, or making progress in the public schools, parents will find Scherich's South Bay School a great help in overcoming the problem.

Scherich received his master's degree from Long Beach College in 1958 and has done advanced work at USC. Scherich taught for many years in a regular classroom and then went into special education. During his tenure in public school, Scherich taught the special class for the neurologically handicapped in a state pilot project for three years.

IN ORDER to gain admittance to Scherich's South Bay School the following procedure should be followed: 1. Call FR 5-0469 for an interview. 2. An application for admittance and the signing of a contract is made to insure your child's enrollment at the earliest possible date, if he meets the requirements. 3. Scherich and his professional consultants then review the application, along with the child's medical and school histories. 4. If your child meets all the requirements, and it is felt the child will benefit from the methods of teaching, he is accepted, the parents notified as soon as possible, and the child admitted at the next opening.

BECAUSE OF Scherich's goal, to return each student to their regular class as soon as possible, only those students are accepted who should obtain these goals. In the past year 40 per cent of the students were able to go back to regular class. Parent meetings are held once a month to help parents help their children.

A 12-month survey shows that nearly one-half of the persons killed in motor vehicles in urban areas were pedestrians, according to the Greater Los Angeles Chapter of the National Safety Council.

Legislation May Take Many Turns During Studies

By VINCENT THOMAS
Assemblyman, 68th District

In legislation, as in other human affairs, things sometimes don't quite work out as planned. A committee, for instance, will set up a hearing with the intention of studying a certain phase of a problem. But those who appear to testify lay other suggestions before the committee, thus opening new areas of research.

A situation of this kind occurred recently. The subcommittee on alcoholic rehabilitation of the assembly committee on government organization scheduled a meeting to find new sources of revenue for the alcoholic rehabilitation program and to investigate the possibility of greater rehabilitation of alcoholics at the community level.

Instead, the subcommittee received a number of varied suggestions for changes in the alcoholic beverage control laws, all intended to improve administration, but none directly related to alcoholic rehabilitation.

SEVERAL YEARS back, the legislature established an alcoholic rehabilitation commission, whose purpose was to foster the establishment of locally operated rehabilitation clinics, offering appropriate medical and psychiatric services to victims of alcoholism.

Support funds were to come from the state general fund. Liquor taxes were raised 10 per cent, and there was the implication that this increase was intended to finance the new program, but there was no legal ear-marking of tax revenues for the purpose.

Later, the commission was abolished, and its functions transferred to the department of public health. A total of eight county clinics are now in existence.

AT THIS hearing, a representative of the department of alcoholic beverage control submitted a number of possible legislative changes for consideration of the group. No specific proposals were made as to exact provisions of any of the suggestions.

Perhaps the most important, and certainly the most controversial, of the recommendations was that calling for licensing by the state of bar managers and other employees primarily engaged in dispensing alcoholic beverages. This requirement, it was said, would help the beverage control department to insure that questionable or undesirable individuals are not given the privilege of engaging in the alcoholic beverage business.

"Licensing will raise the standards of this retail industry and tend to eliminate practices which encourage and perpetuate alcoholism," the department spokesman said. He admitted that such licensing is strenuously opposed by organized labor, which has smothered all previous consideration of the proposal.

ALSO RECOMMENDED was legislation to establish stricter qualifications for holders of both on- and off-sale licenses. Present California law on this subject is good, but can be improved, it was said. Tied to this proposal was another calling for minimum requirements for financial responsibility of applicants for licenses.

Two suggestions as to legal provisions governing locations of licensed premises were made. First, was that acceptable locations be more strictly defined. Second, was that the present restriction of not less than 200 feet distance between two alcoholic licenses of the same kind be raised to a greater, unspecified, distance.

THE LAST suggestion from this source could also present some problems of enforcement. Present law prohibits service of alcoholic beverages to "obviously intoxicated individuals," and sets standards as to interpretation of the term which have been reviewed both administratively and by the courts.

It was proposed that these standards be changed to make it easier to refuse service to such individuals.
