RUTH DAVIS adds hypo-allergenic cosmetics

what is a hypo-allergenic cosmetic?
For more than 20 centuries, cosmetic research has striven to produce a wide range of beauty aids, for every complexion shading, hair coloring or current vogue. Unfortunately, many of the cosmetics thus produced have contained substances that may react violently on certain individuals. Just why is still a matter of conjecture, but medical science has proven that many of the ingredients in ordinary cosmetics can cause allergic reactions—from itching, skin irritations to asthmatic conditions. The substances which cause these reactions are known as allergens. Cosmetics from which these potentially harmful substances have been removed are called hypo-allergenic. The purity of hypo-allergenic cosmetics suits them ideally for use by any woman who cares for her complexion. Hypo-allergenic cosmetics, including Physicians' Formula Cosmetics, set and maintain far higher standards of purity for the protection of the sensitive skin than do ordinary cosmetics.

what are physicians formula cosmetics?
Nearly a quarter of a century ago, Physicians Formula Cosmetics were developed and produced by a doctor who specialized in allergies as a result of his interest in dermatology. Today, Physicians Formula Cosmetics offer the widest choice in shades and types of cosmetics in the entire hypo-allergenic field. Though they are obviously ideal for any woman with a very sensitive skin, or with a tendency to allergies, Physicians Formula Cosmetics also appeal to every intelligent woman who wishes to use only the purest possible cosmetics. They appeal, too, to the wise woman who realizes that much of the beauty of her complexion in the years to come depends directly upon the care she gives that complexion today. So pure are Physicians Formula Cosmetics, that their exact formula will be released to any doctor who wishes to check on them. Thus, anyone with a particular complexion or allergy problem may have her own physician make sure of their suitability to her individual skin.
