

BULLOCK CART EXPRESS . . . Blankets for flood victims, some contributed from Torrance, arrive by bullock cart in the tiny village of Levapur Dih, in northeast India, and village officials put traditional garlands of flowers around neck of Seventh-day Adventist welfare director P. K. Peterson, who brought relief supplies. A part of funds contributed in the current 59th Annual World Missions Appeal of the Torrance Adventist Church will help to finance such aid in many trouble spots throughout the world, according to Louie Miller, campaign director. The Indian villagers had lost homes and crops in recent floods and were suffering from freezing temperatures.
