Torrance Social Security District office now has on hand copies of a printed explanation of the social security tax increase slated for Jan. 1, according to Miles Davis, manager.

Copies of the explanation are available from the Torrance social security office, and a number of employers have ordered copies for distribution with pay checks during January.

THE WORKER'S social security deduction will be increased by one-half of one per cent on the first $4,800 earned beginning the first of the year. This brings the social security tax rate to 5 1/2 per cent.

Employers will match the worker's deduction.

COPIES of the explanation may be obtained by writing, phoning, or visiting the Torrance office at 1408 Crenshaw Blvd. The telephone number is 320-4020.

Employers wishing copies of the explanation should send their requests to the Torrance office.

New Health Problems Taking Place of Old

By K. H. SUTHERLAND, M.D. County Health Officer

During the past several decades there has been a shifting of emphasis in the field of public health, and, owing to the success of modern treatment and disease prevention measures, activities are no longer limited to what was once considered basic public health services, particularly those concerned with communicable disease control, environmental sanitation, and maternal and child health.

But, with the passage of time, new health problems are taking the place of the old familiar and, oddly enough, it is the success of private medicine and public health in this respect that has helped to create the new and compelling challenge.

INSTEAD of the contagious diseases of bygone days which have been largely eliminated or brought under control by immunization and improved sanitation, there is now the problem of rising death rates from heart disease, cancer, cerebral vascular disease, and other illnesses associated chiefly with older persons. There is also the tremendous task of caring for the individuals who are incapacitated by these and other chronic illnesses which range from arthritis to schizophrenia.

Somewhat paradoxically it seems, we are told that there is more disease today than in that period of time when the population was younger and when diphtheria, smallpox, whooping cough, typhoid fever, tuberculosis and similar diseases were commonplace, and when infant and maternal deaths were shockingly numerous. What has happened, of course, is that people now live to an age when illness rates are usually very high and when sickness is of long duration rather than acute and brief.

MANY communities are just beginning to realize that available personnel and hospital facilities to care for the chronically ill and disabled are either sadly inadequate or do not exist, and that co-ordinate home care programs, which provide a complete service for the chronically ill at home, are exceedingly rare. Since the population over 40 is steadily increasing, the problem will become even more critical unless ways are found to prevent many of the diseases now common to the older age group.

Communities must therefore develop health resources that will provide the means for early detection and care of disease in order to halt, insofar as possible, the progress of the chronic diseases and the disabilities that are so often incurred. This, in considered medical opinion, is the very least that must be done.

SUCH MEASURES, it is suggested, might include wider use of multiphasic screening for a number of the more serious disabling disorders, the increased use of cytological examinations in cancer detection, the establishment of "well adult clinics" to keep people well by finding and correcting deviations from good health before lasting harm is done, and the teaching of good health habits including the importance of proper nutrition.

It would be better still, of course, if such disabling diseases could be prevented from occurring at all, but most chronic diseases, sad to say, are not yet preventable.

Considerable pioneer work, experiments, and demonstrations must be undertaken to find the best way of providing these needed health services and facilities. Fortunately, the Community Health Service and Facilities Act passed by Congress in 1961, provided the needed funds in the form of matching grants, and there is every indication that community health services will now begin to widen and improve. In truth, if the staggering burden of a population in which there is an ever-increasing number of chronically ill and disabled persons is to be avoided, they must improve.
