Reining to Quit Torrance Chamber of Commerce Post

DON REINING
Leaving Chamber

Resignation of Don Reining as manager of the Torrance Chamber of Commerce, a post he has held for nearly two years, was disclosed at a meeting of the Board of Directors Tuesday.

Reining told members of his board that he had accepted a post as executive secretary of the Southern California Rock Products Assn. and the Southern California Ready Mix Concrete Assn. effective Feb. 15.

Chamber President Mike Denn expressed the feeling of the board when he told Reining his resignation would be accepted with "great regret."

Reining came to the Torrance Chamber from Lafayette, Ind., and has inaugurated a vigorous program of community evaluation to serve as a blueprint for future planning and development.

An inventory of land resources and a comprehensive economic study of the Torrance area has been in progress under Reining's direction and will be completed soon.

The Chamber directors named a five-man committee to seek a successor to Reining.

dusty for our city," Reining said.

REINING CALLED for industrial tax relief. "Charity does begin at home and some of our industries could stand some tax relief," he said.

"With the gross national product continually growing and with industrial foundations giving away free land, rent water, and taxes, we cannot expect to continue to attract industry as fast as we have in the past decade. In fact, I believe it would be a good idea to pay some attention to the industry that we have here now," he added.

When land sells for $30,000 to $35,000 an acre, Reining said, and when some people will put a price over $50,000, we have a problem. He went on to say that in counties adjacent to Los Angeles improved industrial properties are far below Torrance prices and some land owners will only consider leasing their land which in some cases is not too marketable.

THE CITY and surrounding area has become the headquarters for more than 362,000 people who are dependent upon the jobs provided primarily by business and industry in Torrance.

Recognizing this transition period, the chamber of commerce is currently endeavoring to adjust and accommodate this change, Reining said.

He cited as among the many problems which arise and must be solved as taxes, labor, markets and raw materials.

DEVELOPMENT of a technical airplane and aerospace industry highlight the transition in local economy. The aerospace industry has continued to grow and provide more jobs for the expanding population, Reining said.

The Garrett Corp, which has grown and will continue, plans to move their entire operation to Torrance during the next decade. Reynolds Metals has just completed a $3 million expansion program and the firm's small plant on Crenshaw Boulevard will soon be up for sale, the manager said.

COPIES OF A comprehensive study, completed last week under the supervision of City Attorney Remelmeier, have been placed in the hands of high echelon state officials and members of the Board of Trustees for State Colleges.

The report covered detailed factors in the location problem and concluded that the Torrance site offered the state and the potential student bodies the best and most economical location.

cil asked to have the city's ordinance redrawn to reflect the policy that only usable space be considered when computing necessary off-street parking.

IN OTHER action, the City Council agreed to delay Botanical Gardens Annexation No. 1 hearings for 90 days; referred a request to study access routes to the new Torrance Elementary School to City Manager Wade Peebles and Traffic Engineer James Whitmer for study and a report; awarded a construction contract for the South Torrance Sewer Assessment District; and adopted a resolution asking the State Legislature to oppose legislation which would permit the Metropolitan Transit Authority to levy a tax on Los Angeles County property.

Optimists Hear Geyer

Jack Geyer, general manager of the Los Angeles Blades and former public relations director for the Winter Olympics held in Squaw Valley in 1960, was the featured speaker at the Monday meeting of the Torrance Optimist Club at the Palms Restaurant.

Club members will attend the Blades Hockey game Jan. 24, when the Blades will compete against the Spokane club. This will be a couples night for the Optimists.

Lee Wilson was appointed chairman of a membership drive planning committee at the board meeting which followed the regular session.

It was reported by Clifford R. Graybahl that the 1963 oratorical contest is underway and the high schools in the area have the material necessary to enter.

Irwin E. Kasten, boys' work chairman, reported that a local boy was injured in football and that assistance was needed with his doctor bill. The club allocated funds to pay a substantial portion of the bill.
