Hollywood Reporter

By Mike Connolly

Dear Mike: Is Jayne Mansfield really dumb or does she just act that way?—Shep Huebner, Youngstown, Ohio.
Dear Shep: Anyone who owns a mansion on Sunset Boulevard, sparkles with diamonds, and drags minks and ermines behind her when she walks into a party can't be all dumb.
Dear Mr. Connolly: I want to get all the information I can about the house in the movie, "Sayonara"—who built it, what its history is, the owner's name, etc.—Mrs. Betty McClure, Marietta, Ga.
Dear Mrs. McClure: It was built by Warner Brothers' art directors on Stage 18 at the studio and has long since been torn down to make way for the "77 Sunset Strip" series.
Dear Mike: Do you think Greta Garbo will ever make another film? After seeing that brief flash of her fabulous face in TV's "Fabulous Era," the answer has got to be yes-yes-YES!—Francis Keppens, Chula Vista, Calif.
Dear Francis: The answer is no-no-NO.
Dear Mike: Is it true that all the people in Lawrence Welk's orchestra are Roman Catholic? And is Ted Mack a son-in-law of Welk's?—Mrs. E. R. Swanson, Tionesta, Pa.
Dear Mrs. Swanson: No to No. 1 (Welk isn't that narrow-minded) and No to No. 2, too.
Dear Sir: Does Kim Novak really think she's capable of acting the same part in the remake of "Of Human Bondage" that Bette Davis did in the original? HAW!—Lillian Mackaye, Youngstown, Ohio.
Dear Lillian: HAW! yourself—her producers think she can.
Dear Mike: Please settle a family argument. My husband and I remember Frederic March starred in "Death of a Salesman" about 10 years ago. However, my husband INSISTS this picture has been made again and starred (of all people!) Red Skelton. I feel this is incorrect.—Marjorie D., Stockton, Calif.
Dear Marjorie: You're right; your husband is wrong.

Dear Mike: I live in a medium-sized Southern city and am just an average-looking Joe with acting ability. I want to start a new life as an actor and don't know whether to head for Broadway of Hollywood. Do you really have to look like Warren Beatty to be a star today?—Charley Nash, Savannah, Ga.
Dear Charley: No, you should look like Rock Hudson or David Janssen. On the other hand, such average-looking Joes as Rod Steiger and Peter Falk have become stars recently. Good looks help but they're not everything. Where to go? My advice would be West, young man. Hollywood is no paradise (jobwise) but it still offers, through TV, more opportunities than Broadway.
Riddle-This, Mr. Smart Aleck: What's the reason for the "hitch" in Jerry Lewis's supposedly happy married life?—Charlotte Hawkins, Watervliet, N.Y.
Dear Charlotte: They say he has flipped for Stella Stevens, his leading lady in his last movie, "The Nutty Professor."

Sir: Why do those tired old movie actors keep making movies, especially the ones that aren't on any top star lists and haven't been for years? Why don't they just give up and retire?—Marie Coughlin, Shreveport, La.
Dear Marie: Telling an actor he's ready to retire is like waving a red flag in his face. Besides, you're probably unaware that many of the older stars are very important at the box office: Since your handwriting indicates you are youthful, perhaps you should know that the "old folks" go to the movies, too, and that some of them have followed the careers of the Jimmy Stewarts, Henry Fondas, Cary Grants, and Bing Crosbys for 20 to 30 years!

Dear Hipster: Quit writing about "Baby Jane." We KNOW what happened to her! Now

Ninth Grade Student Has Green Thumb

The greenest thumb in the Los Angeles City School system belongs to 14-year-old John Robinson, a White Junior High School student, who lives at 20826 S. Normandie Ave. Robinson, a ninth grader, took first-place honors in competition against junior high school students at Pierce College and helped his school win a fifth-place award. Among the events in which the students competed were preparation of seed flats, potting plants, identifying fertilizers, and recognizing plants and weeds. The student, who plans to become a soil scientist, is active in the school garden club. Larry West is agriculture teacher at Stephan White.
