

Boquets and Brickbats Keep Postman Hopping

By Count Marco

Brickbats and compliments—I don't mind either, because I know you're reading me, and where there's a jolt there's sure to be something stirring at the other end.

In many cases I'm hitting home and you're thanking me for it. You might like to know that I personally read every single letter that crosses my desk, and I attempt to answer all those with return addresses.

Like this one: "Did the Count's mother ever have any 'children'?—Cordially, H."

Yes, she did, and both have last names. Do you?

"Dear Count Marco: I took all your advice. Now I have no husband. I had been married 13 years and have four children. I always took orders from 'The King,' who is a fat, sloppy 210 pounds and has been arrested 64 times for fighting.

"He is now on three years' probation, which I doubt very much he'll last through. He drinks like a fish and—get this—he left me for a woman who weighs 160 pounds and is built like a truck, swears something awful, nags and makes sexy suggestions to every man she meets.

"Three and four nights a week I spot him parked across the street spying on me. Now why do you suppose he does that? I still love the big jerk and think he is only trying to hurt me because I hurt him and he really loves me. Do you think he will come back for me?—Obedience-trained wife from Chicago."

Yes, I do—with the little man in the white coat.

Dear Sir: Confession is good for the soul. This morning I read, "Take off your low heels and put on high heels." Of course I didn't believe you. I am not sloppy otherwise.

"I am nearly 85 years old, and I've worn low heels for years. But just as an experiment I put on high heels, and to my surprise I do feel rejuvenated.—Truly yours, D. R."

It's never too late, and the world of femininity can always use wonderful examples like you to show them. Keep it up.

"Dear Count Marco: I would never miss reading one of your columns. I want to tell you your outlook on wives is wonderful and you have the answer to making a lot of happy marriages if women weren't so stubborn and didn't think you're picking on them.

"I will be married again soon, and you have helped teach me a lot. We both agree with you on all your ideas. We think you're grand and, believe me, you're so right about American women thinking all the doing must be on his side. I hope you keep writing for the rest of my life. I am only 27 and hope to live at least 50 more years, all of which I want to be happily married, with thanks to you.—L.M."

You will be; I guarantee it, if you stick with me. Best wishes. (Distributed by Chronicle Features.)
