

CAMPAIGN HEADQUARTERS . . . United Way, Inc., has established its Harbor area fund drive headquarters at 20021 S. Vermont Ave. in Torrance through the courtesy of the Shell Chemical Company, located at the same address. Welcoming the organization are general manager Jack Cunningham, vice president Samuel Bowlby, and plant manager Stanley Williamson.

YOUNG PILOT . . . Douglas Gardner, 21900 Martin St., gets a briefing on the controls of a Boeing 707 jet liner from TWA Captain John Dobberteen. The youngster was one of some 3,000 members of the families of Hughes Aircraft employees who attended a special open house at International Airport on Labor Day. In addition to the tours of TWA facilities, the families also took brief flights over the City of the Angels.

WINS CERTIFICATE . . . Maj. William E. Boell (right), of 4231 W. Artesia Blvd., receives a certificate from Maj. Gen. William J. Hixson, commander of the 63rd Infantry Division, for his perfect performance on tests in the division's annual intelligence school. Major Boell was top man in a group of 37 officers and enlisted men who received certificates.

Professor Gives Tips To Parents

Hundreds of Torrance youngsters will be starting to school for the first time this week and the event could cause parents a multitude of headaches.

Dr. Charles M. Brown, professor of education at the University of Southern California, lists a dozen do's and don'ts for parents preparing a youngster for the start of school.

1. Teach him his address and telephone number. Dr. Brown feels it is good number-memory training in these days of area and zip codes.

2. MAKE a dry run of the walk to school. Walk around the school with the child and discuss what the room will look like. If possible, teach him his teacher's name.
3. If he is to be driven to school, mother should find out the traffic pattern at the school so she will know where he can safely be let out.
4. IF HE is to go to school by bus, show him the bus stop.
5. Explain to him about crossing guards.
6. Be sure of school starting time.
7. In choosing his clothes, buy those not too radically different from those worn by other children.
8. MAKE sure he is in good physical health. Now is a good time for a health check-up.

9. If he has any special health problems, such as allergies, diabetes or epilepsy, report this to his teacher.
10. Do not mention difficulties you had in school. Do not lead him to expect a hard time because you had one.
11. LET him know you do not expect all A's but you do expect him to do his best.
12. Send him to the bathroom just before he goes out the door.

... Bookman's

"I emerge from my travels among the mists of yesterday, full of contentment . . . It is the exile's contentment that comes from a long visit to his homeland. On whatever skimpy shores I dwell today, I knew once a luxurious land . . . The dream is in me that one thing I know is still unchanged — youth. I am sure somewhere, untouched by foreboding and loud with unconstructive enthusiasms, youth flourishes, indifferent to all but itself . . ."

Martime enthusiasts are alerted: "The Lore of Ships," which Holt, Rinehart and Winston will publish in October ($23.95), is without question the most overwhelming book of its kind ever. The local Holt representative showed me a collection of sheets the other day.

Illustrated with more than 1550 plates and drawings of diverse nautical details, "The Lore of Ships" results from international co-operation between maritime specialists in Denmark, Finland, Britain, Holland, Norway, Sweden, Germany and the United States. It covers sailing ships, merchant vessels, warships, liners and just about everything else that floats, of all periods. Naturally, we shall cover this in more detail after its official debut. Talk about Christmas in October.
