Kiwanis Clubs to Issue Anti-Crime Publication

Kiwanis clubs throughout the U.S. and Canada, in cooperation with local, school, and youth officials, and the National Council on Crime and Delinquency, will spearhead a timely new program directed toward helping youngsters make better citizens of themselves, according to President Merle H. Tucker of Gallup, New Mexico.

The program, called "You and the Law," is a series of educational devices designed to teach youngsters, from the seventh through the twelfth grades, the basic fundamentals and protections of the law. The program's aim is stated as "to help adolescents recognize the sometimes fine line between high spirits and a serious breach of the law. No one frowns on high spirits," it says, "but fun simply cannot encroach upon your neighbor's person or property without serious consequences."

THE BOOKLET and supplementary materials were written by the National Council on Crime and Delinquency in consultation with nationally prominent educators and police officials. The idea of the program, "You and the Law," was originally conceived and developed by the Westchester, New York Citizens Committee—an affiliate of the National Council, several years ago. As a result of the program, and other practical steps in prevention, youthful delinquency was substantially reduced there, and the project was widely acclaimed.

When it was decided to make a national project of "You and the Law" the National Council on Crime and Delinquency asked Kiwanis International—long a leader in service to youth—to act as co-sponsors.

IN A BOOKLET which the Kiwanis club is making available, through proper authorities, to youngsters of the community, the questions are posed: "This is a free country, isn't it? So why can't we do anything we feel like doing?" The booklet answers itself by saying, "Here are the answers: We could if each of us lived entirely alone, but this is not possible. America is a land of freedom; freedom to do as we wish and go where we will—but only if we do not trespass on the rights of others. At this freedom ends."

The booklet will be supplemented by school assemblies, Boy Scout, Girl Scout, Key Club, and other youth group meetings devoted to the subject; field trips to courts; the viewing of films; and discussions on the law, on delinquency, and on rights and responsibilities, moderated by teachers and other youth leaders.
