Flood Disaster Appeal Made by Mayor Isen

Mayor Albert Isen this week urged Torrance to be among the first to "lend a hand" to flood disaster victims through the American Red Cross.

"The need is urgent and must be met at once if lives are to be saved and suffering reduced," he said. With a network of relief state area and 260 "professional" disaster workers assisting established over a sixing several thousand volunteers, the Los Angeles Red Cross Chapter announced this week an emergency appeal for a minimum of $150,000 to help provide food, clothing and shelter for victims of the Eastern seaboard flood disaster.

Nationally—the Red Cross is appealing for a total of $5,000,000 to be rushed to the disaster area.

Isen pointed out that Red Cross has made an initial provision of $2,000,000 for the preliminary phases of its relief operation, "but the big job is still ahead. After the flood waters subside and the emergency feeding and sheltering operation is over, Red Cross disaster teams will move into the field to rehabilitate families on an individual-need basis.

"Homes and household furnishings must be restored. Medical expenses must be paid; means of earning a livelihood must be restored to those who have lost all their possessions and are not in a position to help themselves," Isen said. "It will cost many millions of dollars, which I am confident the American people will willingly provide."

As of early this week, Isen reported the Red Cross had 107 shelters open, 30 canteens in operation, and in one night alone had housed, fed and sheltered 12,000 persons. All who needed it were being issued new clothing. Eight thousand families are in the process of registering for long-range Red Cross assistance, he said.

Pointing out that over the years Torrance has stood in the front ranks of "people helping people" through their contributions to Red Cross, the Mayor stressed that "now we are again faced with the specter of distress of human misery over a great area of the populous East.

"In the name of the affected people, I ask everyone to join me in contributing generously through our Red Cross Chapter," he declared. Contributions should be sent to the "Disaster Fund," Los Angeles Red Cross Chapter, 1200 S. Vermont, Los Angeles.

F. E. Cooper of 1225 Beech street, Torrance who is Monarch Finer Foods representative in this area, attended a sales meeting in Los Angeles Friday, August 19, to discuss the company's promotion plans for 1956, according to an announcement by Robert B. McMahan, western division sales manager.

A total of 150,000 pounds of 75 tons of the 10 to 12 pound albacore will be sold at this low price. Economy-minded housewives will want to take advantage of the sale to stock their freezers with this delicious fish for future use, Clark officials stated. The albacore is also an excellent fish for smoking or canning and makes a tasty dish when baked fresh.
