Audio-Visual Aids Worth A Thousand Words At EC

Believing in the old Oriental adage that a picture is worth a thousand words, the El Camino college instruction department supplements its regular program with extensive audio-visual aids.

This philosophy on the value of audio-visual aids in the field of education is exemplified by the tremendous growth of the program in high schools and colleges across America in the last 15 years.

Under the guidance of Alfred J. Wrobel, the audio-visual center at the local college is keeping pace with the rest of the nation's colleges and universities in the increasing use of audio and visual instructional aids.

Enriches Program
Basic function of the audio-visual center is to assist the Department of Instruction to enrich the teaching program of El Camino College. Specifically, the center acts as a service department, directed by an Audio-Visual Coordinator and staffed by several classified employees. In general the duties encompass the procurement, development and distribution of audio-visual materials, equipment and information.

The audio-visual center is a service center which has as its primary aim the improvement of instruction through more efficient communication.

Today instructors recognize that there are many teaching techniques, other than those of the traditional classrooms, which are essential for optimum learning.

Common among the communication tools of the modern teacher are motion pictures, models, television, field trips, dramatizations, demonstrations, exhibits, photographs, filmstrips, diagrams, slides, maps, charts, graphs, radio, recordings, and the like. Audio-visual instruction is a collective term used to label how teachers are using a wide variety of media of communication to improve instruction.

Clearinghouse
The audio-visual center is not merely a storage place where materials are cataloged, stored and signed in and out. Neither is it a projection room or a film library. It is all these things and much more. It is a clearinghouse for audio-visual problems and solutions.

At El Camino three separate units are involved in carrying through the purpose of the audio-visual program.

A film library containing 260 films owned by the college is maintained by qualified personnel. Although this permanent library is being expanded each year most of the films used by instructors are rented from larger institutions.

Among its facilities is a listening room where listening hours for all language classes are scheduled. At other times the room is available for informal use by instructors and students.

A production room with a staff artist on duty four hours daily is also available. Instructors are encouraged to develop instructional aids here aided by a large supply of excellent materials.

Way of Teaching
Audio-visual instruction is neither an educational "extra-curricular activity" nor a substitute for teaching. It is a way of teaching and one which permeates all parts of the curriculum.

Almost one hundred per cent of the 7800 students enrolled at EC take advantage of the audio-visual center in one manner or another.

In important cog in the mechanics of the department is a former student of El Camino, Rande Rasi. The efficiency of the center reflects his contributions, and it is his ambition to go into this work upon completion of his studies at Long Beach State College.

PHOTOSYNTHESIS

Research on photosynthesis, the mechanism through which plants capture sunlight and store it in the world's energy-bearing foods, has long been hailed as one of the most promising peacetime applications of atomic energy.
