Respect the cleanliness of our roads and streets, says the Automobile Club of Southern California. Litter tossed from moving cars mars the natural beauty of the countryside as well as increasing the cost of highway maintenance.

Rozann Finds Near East Crises Closer in Greece

(Editor's Note—Rozann Willis, a North High School student, is now in Greece as a summer exchange student. This is the fourth of a series of letters she is writing about her experiences.)

Hi Everybody!
"US Marines seize Lebanon beach head battalion lands from units of the sixth fleet."
For more than 30 minutes a sound was heard as we four American students took in each and every word. For the first time since our arrival we possessed newspapers printed in English and to us they were more precious than gold.
—It's more than a little frightening to read about Marines landing not more than miles from your door step, but at the same time it's very good to know that they represent the principles you believe in and the land you love.

Greece is a small country, but its people are fiercely proud of their independence and have fought many times to maintain it. There are many beautiful monuments in Patras erected in memory of its brave people.

In Insialonia Square the statue of Germon, the man who led the Greeks in a revolution against the Turks, stands proudly, holding high his banner of freedom.

Queen Olga square is the site of the statue honoring the unknown warriors of Patras.
A beautiful fountain dominates the square of King George which was named for George II of Greece.

St. Nicholas street, located in the heart of the city, originates at the end of the pier, where the only lighthouse in Patras stands guard over the harbor.

As you walk up the street you first pass through Allies square. Then come the tourist shops and the restaurants with their bright lights and tables set out under the stars.

Next you cross Riga Ferreou street, which is followed by Malizonos and Corinth. After that you can see only the twelve flights of steps leading to the base of the Venetian castle which overlooks the city.

Cars and horses are unheard of on St. Nicholas street from 7 p.m. to midnight the people of Patras promenade down the middle of the street, stopping once in a while to speak to friends or to have dinner. Last Sunday we took the train to Psathopirgos, a small village about ten miles from here. After a refreshing swim we ate our lunch under the trees.

In the afternoon we rented a boat and as we floated around in the cool water we took turns singing American and Greek songs. While we waited for the bus to take us home we danced around the deserted road to the music of someone's portable radio. Tomorrow we shall visit Olympia, the home of the Ancient Greek God Zeus, and my mother says I must go to bed early so I'll say, "Good-bye," for now and get some much-needed shut-eye.

Affectionately yours,
Rozann Willis
