Ryan Firebee Is Star of Navy Meet

Ryan Firebee jet targets, served fresh every 30 minutes on a race-track range, 50 miles off the coast of Southern California, will highlight the early morning hours of Operation Top Gun, the navy's fourth annual naval-weapons meet.

Operation Top Gun headquarters will be at the marine corps' auxiliary air station, Yuma, with participating units from Brown Field, San Diego, and the Pt. Mugu missile test center. Pt. Mugu. The meet, now under way, will last through tomorrow.

Operation Top Gun marks the first time the navy will use a remote - controlled, free - flying high performance jet target in major weapons meet action. Air-launched from P2V Neptunes and JD-1D jig-dogs, southeast of San Nicholas island, the remote controlled KDA-4s will scoot to mission altitude before taking assigned positions on the oval range bordered by San Nicholas and the Santa Cruz island chain. The Top Gun target has been assigned the inner range of the large off-shore Pacific missile range, approximately 50 miles off the Pt. Mugu Naval Missile Test Station.

Utility Squadron Three (VU-3) from the Brown Field Naval Auxiliary Air Station south of San Diego, and Missile Training Unit 3 and the target department at Pt. Mugu will handle the target operation, with launch craft staging from Brown Field and Pt. Mugu. Additionally, a P2V launch airplane from Guided Missile Support Squadron 2, Roosevelt Roads, Puerto Rico, has been assigned to the Firebee operation.

Top Navy pilots will match wits with the jet-fast Firebee in F8U-1 Crusaders and F3H-2 Demons, two of the Navy's highest performance, all-weather jet fighters. The F8U-1 Crusaders, laden with the deadly heat-seeking Sidewinders will scramble from the Marine Corps Auxiliary Air Station, Yuma, Arizona, the home base for Operation "Top Gun," while the F3H Demons, armed with the Sparrow III guided missiles, will chase the Firebee from their base at Pt. Mugu.

In all, 13 launch craft will stage from the Brown Field and Pt. Mugu sites to "serve" the Firebee to the defending fighter-interceptors.

Sixty Firebees, all clad in the bright Dayglo paint, in special Top Gun configuration, will be on deck for four days of realistic combat. The KDA-4, the Navy member of the Ryan Firebee family, is a high performance remote controlled jet target missile, and holder of the Navy's target aircraft endurance and altitude marks.

In a record flight at the Naval Air Missile Test Center, Pt. Mugu, the KDA-4 flew over 48,000 feet at 500 miles an hour in a total flight of one hour, 18 minutes, with 53 minutes of the total flight time above 40,000 feet. On fuel depletion, the target glided to 14,000 feet where parachute recovery was commanded. The KDA-4 is powered by a Fairchild J-44 turbojet engine.

The KDA-4 was flown by the U.S. Army, the Royal Canadian Army and the Royal Canadian Air Force in evaluation of the Army's Nike Hercules at the U.S. Army's First Arctic Test Detachment, Fort Churchill, Manitoba, Canada, last winter.

The KDA targets will be remotely controlled by two ground controllers at Pt. Mugu. With targets scheduled on range at 30 minute intervals, the first controller will fly one target on the range while the second controller monitors the launch and climb to mission altitude of a second bird.

Firebee ground crews will work round the clock at both Brown Field and Pt. Mugu to keep fresh targets ready for battle. The Top Gun schedule calls for eight KDA targets the first and third mornings of the meet for Sidewinder action, four KDA's the first and third afternoons for Sparrow firing.

On the fourth and final clean-up day of the meet, two KDA's will be on station from 8 to 10 a.m. for Sparrow, four targets from 10 to 12 a.m. for Sidewinder, two Firebees from 1 to 2 p.m. for Sparrow and four KDA's from 2 to 5 p.m. for Sidewinder action.

The defending fighters will be vectored to the attacking Firebee targets by ground controllers at Pt. Mugu.
