

New Season Male Call Points to Lots of International Accents

'Ambassador,' 'Continental,' 'Ivy,' 'TransContinental' Are Leaders

No man should have any trouble finding businesswear to flatter him this Spring, says the American Institute of Men's and Boys' wear. There is a model for every taste and every age. The newest—combining many, worldwide influences—is the "American International."

Previewed last year at the International Association of Clothing Designers Convention in Rome, this style enhances a man's appearance in virtually any and all settings, anywhere in the world. The shoulders and lapels are slightly wider than in other top fashion styles right now.

The coats are a bit more fitted at the waist, but the slim silhouette—so familiar in many other models these days—is magically kept. Predictions are that this model will quickly become a real favorite.

The most widely accepted suit model is the more conservative "American Natural," with a slimmed-down look inspired by the American Continental. "Continental" have moved away from extremes. With many hand-some modifications, they continue to give a slim-trim profile. The "Trans-American" model is the more continental, cut to the American taste. The "American Ambassador," originated by California designers, incorporates easy slimming lines with jackets a bit shorter than a year ago. Ivy styling is on the scene perhaps bigger than ever—but look for this model to be less "gimmicky" than before. Fewer Ivy business suits have back-strapped trousers and lapseams which the more mature man will find to his liking.

To complement these dressier suits, new touches have been added to dress shirts too. These include patterned fabrics, British type stripes, miniature over plaids and checks. Traditional white as well as ivory and olive go especially well with Ivy styling. Grays, tans, and blues are also high on the list.

Suits now come in three basic weights—winter, mid-weight for in-between days and featherweights for the hot days of summer. Shirts, too, have now been introduced in a variety of fabric weights suitable for different weather conditions, including the super lightweights with millions of tiny "air vents" for hot weather comfort. Short sleeve styles in dress and casual shirts make for utmost comfort and ease of wear during the hottest days of summer.

Dominating new notes in topcoats and raincoats are shorter lengths and the lighter weights. Colors in topcoats are lighter and brighter than in the past seasons, while rainstyling are coming in for greater styling and a wider range of patterning.

Men's hats continue to accent the smaller shapes—but fewer are shown in the familiar dark shades which are now giving way to mediums and lights. For spring and summer, lots of new lightweightersushables will be ahead for men.

A brief look at the new neckwear shows that the fashion emphasis is on brighter colors and stronger patterns. Staging a comeback are smart ties with the designs under the knot.

FIESTA PLANS — Planning the fiesta to be held April 15 at Bishop Montgomery High School are (left to right) Sister William, Joseph Schneiderhan, Father Micheal McNulty, Father Lawrence Lis, O.F.M. conv.; and Mrs. James C. Anderson. Sister William and Father Lawrence are in charge of the student activities.

Spring Gloves Rise High To Meet Cropped Sleeves

Spring costumes, with shorter length sleeves go hand-in-hand with glove fashions—especially in soft, handsome leathers.

Smart yet practical, leather gloves are seen this season in muted, misty colors that match suits and dresses—in sharp, spicy tones to give flavor to an ensemble. One favorite cool color is a pale yellow shade that may become this year's newest neutral. Other leather glove hues include delicate bone, light green, and an understated coral. Strong tones lean to bright fuchsia, deep brown and a strong red in smooth and suede leathers. As always, white leather gloves are basic for the feminine wardrobe. Keyed to the softer, fluid look of spring dresses, daytime gloves are decorated, in a variety of ways—eyelet embroidery, diamond-shaped cut-boutonsouts, self-leather bows and covered buttons. Tiny pearl buttons adorn shorties as well as four and six-button gloves. Leather shorties show off with scalloped cuffs, while longer gloves sometimes have horizontal shirring up the back. Decorations on formal gloves are more elaborate—some of the 18-button lengths boasting swirls of beadwork or floral embroidery. Tailored gloves harmonize with the understated look of spring suits and coats in a wide range of leathers—including kid, lambskin, pigskin and doeskin. Tailored and casual gloves favor saddle-stitch effects and corded seam cuffs—usually in contrasting colors and often in combinations of smooth and suede. A new pair of leather gloves can smartly accent a classic costume and help one good suit cover many daytime occasions. LaunderLeather gloves wash easily in soap and water, leaving the gloves soft, pliable, free of wrinkles and colorfast.
