

LAHC to Offer Class for Fall

Chemical Glass Manipulation, a new course in Chemical Technology, will be offered for the first time at Harbor College during the fall semester, according to an announcement today by George Rainey, chairman of the applied technology division.

The class will meet on Tuesday and Thursday evenings from 6:30 to 9:30 beginning Tuesday, September 12.

Glass Manipulation is a six-hour laboratory class emphasizing elementary techniques and practices of the manipulation and fabrication of simple laboratory apparatus from heat resistant glass. The operations of bending, cutting, grinding, pulling and joining glass are included in the course. Students will be required to fabricate basic laboratory glassware.

Pedro V. Aguirre, instructor for the class, has an extensive background in chemical glass repair and fabrication, having been employed for more than thirty years with the Union Oil Company in charge of this technical area. Aguirre is a member of the American Glass Blowers' Society.

Registration for the course is by appointment. Early application will be necessary in order to obtain a priority registration permit for registration on August 22, 23, 24 from 6 to 8 p.m. Applications for admission and registration permits may be obtained at the admissions office of the college.

"This is an elementary but highly technical course," stated Rainey, "which has the objective of providing a knowledge of glass as a workable material, developing manipulative skill in fabricating chemical glass apparatus and teaching safety techniques of handling glassware. The class meets a long-existing need for glass handling techniques in the many petroleum and chemical laboratories of the harbor area."
