

Sermons Livened With Illustrations

By SUSAN ANDERSON

The word "sermon" need not be accompanied with a groan any longer. At least not at Sunday evening services at Community Baptist Church in Torrance.

The Rev. Richard Addison and a young talented member of his congregation decided to do something to make the sermon more attention-holding and the congregation less fidgety.

Jesse Gutierrez, a member of the Rev. Addison's congregation and a student at Chovinard's Art Institute, supplements the Rev. Addison's sermons with drawings each Sunday evening during the evening service.

"While he speaks, I sketch pictures related to the subject of the sermon," Gutierrez said.

He feels that the drawings help the congregation get a better, more realistic understanding of the sermon.

Although he has been doing this only about two months, he has a "garage full" of drawings and sketches, already, he added.

Gutierrez' interest in art was evident even before his graduation from Narbonne High School in January.

His activities, however, were not limited to art. He played center and right guard on the Narbonne football team, as well as being historian for the Key Club scrapbook, which took first place in competition with other Key Club scrapbooks throughout California.

Jesse, who plans to do Christian art as a living, is attending Chovinard's Art Institute on a scholarship.
