SWINGING DOWN A LANE

There are a lot of you people who bowl but never read the Bowling News so I would like to take this opportunity of quoting an article which appeared in October 4 issue. Question? Is there any good reason why these better bowlers (200 average or over) have to enter the little tournaments? Why can't they stick to the tournaments that have their own class of bowlers?

It seems a group of men entered a tourney each averaging from 175 to 195. It is the type of tourney where strikes count. Up to a certain point this has been strictly a fun tournament with the same bunch of fellows making up the biggest share of the entry list. There is a "King of the Hill" feature with the winner bowling against the "King" and a jack pot which has been building up for about four months, with about $500 in it. The King has a chance to break the pot and it takes six strikes in a row to do it. Now all of a sudden the Pro bowler decides to enter with his 200 or over average, up to this time it has been pretty much the same bowlers shooting and adding to the pot. The Pro comes in and gets 22 strikes out of 30 to become the "King" and a chance at the jack pot.

Six strikes in a row are just about the limit for an average bowler, so it is very hard to compete against a pro and win out. This is the fault of the management of the house, and I think something should be done about this situation and soon. The people who make up these tournaments should state in their rules that only averages up to 175 or 195 which ever the case may be would be eligible.

I remember about three years ago my husband and I entered a tournament, we did very well we made the semi-finals, in the semi-finals bowling two lanes from us was a man with a 145 average, he rolled two games over 200 and a 198 for his third game, with his handicap he had over a 700 series. This man's timing and form on the lanes was perfection. This is my opinion, a bowler who averages a 146 will fall down in one of his three games, I have yet to see other wise. Needless to say we have never entered another tournament outside of the WIBC and ABC City and State.

IN THE SERVICE

Edward Grajeda, 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. Rapheal Grajeda of 18107 Amie Ave., Torrance, Calif., is undergoing nine weeks basic training at the Naval Training Center, Great Lakes, Ill.

The training includes naval orientation, history, and organization; basic military law; seamanship and ship-board routine; ordnance, gunnery and damage control; sentry duty and military drill; physical fitness; swimming, first aid and survival.

If any of you people would be interested in writing in your opinions regarding this situation please do so, maybe if we start something we can help clean up the bad taste so many have.

During their training period recruits receive tests and interviews which determine their future assignments in the Navy. Upon completion of training they are assigned to service schools for technical instruction or to ships or shore stations for on-the-job training in a Navy rating specialty. Naval training produces the power in seapower by supplying qualified personnel to man the ships, aircraft and shore stations of today's Navy.
