

She's Lovely Until She Talks

Texas and New York women have a similar way about them. Both dress in the height of fashion, and both speak a language that is neither passable nor recognizable as the King's English or even in the wildest stretch of the imagination as Americanese.

Of the two, undoubtedly the worst offenders are the women of New York. Mon Dieu!

No matter how carefully they may dress, or how beautifully groomed and gowned they may be, the minute they open their mouths the entire picture is shattered.

The fault lies with the school system, as I see it. The teachers can't speak English and thus the poor little students repeat only what they hear.

They adjust to it but does the rest of the world? While French and Italian may be acceptable international languages, New Yorkese never is.

I suggest that the first step in cleaning up the voice boxes of dirty old New York is to start with the women teachers.

The Government of this country should give up the construction of one missile and divert the funds thus saved into a more merciful mission; teaching voice and diction to New York teachers.

I specify women teachers, because they are at this time in the majority and thus do the most harm.

Each teacher should be required to make a recording test of her voice. After she has heard the playback several times, then let her hear how the same passage sounds when spoken in English.

Even the toughest will be forced to admit that something should be done to improve the diction and voice. Once they have cleaned up their voices, it will be easy to clean up their little charges.

And it is easy for you, too, in other States to clean up your own voice boxes. If you think terrible voices belong solely to New York teachers, forget it. I cite them as the greatest offenders, but many others of you offend as well.

I wish you could hear yourselves as I hear you — rattling on with your voices echoing up in your noses. Or whining like a child who can't get its way, or exploding loudly like a bomb under an enemy bridge.

It wouldn't hurt you to make a recording of your voice, play it back, over and over—if you can stand the shock — then do something drastic about it, such as taking diction and voice lessons.

Now, there indeed is a constructive way of spending your time. Where will you find that extra time? By dropping out of PTA or no longer being imprisoned as a den mother.

Here's to better voices, clearer voices, cleaner voices. Here as well as in New York.

Goldwater Teenagers Plan Sale

The Torrance Teenagers for Goldwater held their second bake sale Saturday. Members baked tasty oven treats and served as clerks in the Saturday sidewalk sale. The fund-raising activity was so highly successful that Oct. 17 has been set for another Goldwater bake sale. Plans are now in preparation for a car wash to be held Sunday, Oct. 4, at 228th and Sepulveda Boulevard. Tickets will soon be available at the 17th Congressional District Goldwater Headquarters.

PROCEEDS of the group's activities are used to finance the campaign efforts of Senator Barry M. Goldwater for the Presidency of the United States.

Future fund-raising activities include a "Political Spoof" play to be held at the local Goldwater Headquarters. The play is a political satire about a day in the life of Lyndon Baines Johnson. A paper drive, and a "silent" auction also are scheduled for the near future.

A LARGE, red, white and blue specially designed badge, designed for teenage support of Goldwater, is worn by club members. Large lettering on the badge states "If I were 21 I'd Vote for Barry."

Although recently organized, the club has over fifty members and continues to grow daily. Information concerning membership and the club's activities can be obtained by telephoning FAIR-fax 0-1964.

Narbonne Trio Launches Hospital Career Course

Three Narbonne High School students are the first to take part in a Harbor General Hospital program designed to acquaint high school students with non-professional careers in hospitals.

The program, devised in conjunction with school authorities, combines actual work experience with classroom studies. Students enrolling in the program will draw no pay but will be given credits toward graduation from high school. Their training will be a recommendation for consideration when applying for hospital jobs.

STUDENTS WILL be rotated to different jobs during the semester to give them a chance to determine which they would pursue after graduation, Edward Foley, hospital personnel officer, said.

"There are openings in many areas of hospital work such as medical stenography, clerical, typing, gardening, stockroom, dietary, ambulance attendants, nursing aides, and craft positions. Students may enroll although the school semester has started," Foley said.

PCB Offers Motorist Smog Device Assist

The reported removal and plugging of crankcase control devices in the Los Angeles area has created concern at the State Motor Vehicle Pollution Control Board, according to D. A. Jensen, MVPCB executive officer.

"Not only is this illegal," said Jensen, "but it is an expense to the motorist and could have serious effects on the automobile engine."

Persons having trouble with a crankcase device should return to the installer, who is responsible for proper operation; call the closest California Highway Patrol office, or write the MVPCB offices at 217 W. First St., Los Angeles.

This Setter Has A Winning Way

By DARRELL MADDOX Press-Herald Staff Writer

The pride of a Torrance family is a 2-year-old Irish Setter who is showing the technique for winning awards.

American Mexican Champion Webline Winning Way C. D., or more commonly known as Winnie by the family, has well over 100 trophies. "Most people believe a show dog can't be a family pet but it isn't so," says Tom Palmer of 2114 Arlington Ave., Winnie's owner. Winnie's proud owners include Mr. and Mrs. Palmer and their three children, Jeffrey 7, Susan 6 and Jeanie 4. Winnie's most recent accomplishments include winning several ribbons and trophies at Ensenda, Mexico late last month. She won three ribbons and a trophy Sept. 5 at Klamath Falls, Ore., and an award the next day at Medford, Ore. She won the Mexican championship in Mexico and American championship at Klamath Falls.

Palmer will have a booth Oct. 23 through Nov. 1 at the Hobby and Do It Yourself Show in Shrine Auditorium where Winnie will be on display and Palmer will answer questions on dogs, such as the proper method of trimming nails and cleaning out ears.
