Marine Corps Plan for Local Platoon Revealed

The Marine Corps is accepting applications for the special training group to be known as the Challenge Platoon, it was announced here yesterday by Gunnery Sgt. Chet Pavey, Marine recruiter for Torrance.

Membership in the platoon will be limited to a total of 75 men from the Torrance and surrounding areas. The platoon will leave for training on June 29, and will remain together as a unit while at San Diego.

Sergeant Pavey stressed the fact that special recruit platoons will have no easier time in the tough Marine boot camp in any way. The 11 weeks will include training in rifle marksmanship, drill, physical conditioning, judo and karate, as well as many hours in the classroom studying academic subjects.

AFTER BOOT camp the Challenge Platoon will remain together during the four weeks of infantry training each new Marine receives before departing to his permanent duty station.

Following their initial training period the new Marines will probably be scattered to the winds, said the Sergeant, as have thousands before them. Most will be assigned to technical schools while others will join the fighting arms of the Marine Corps in infantry, engineers, tanks, missile artillery, and the aviation specialties.

SEERGEANT PAVEY said that under the Marine Corps 120 day delay enlistment plan, a man may be tested and physically examined up to four months before he reports for active duty. The time spent between testing and enlistment will count toward promotions in rank and for pay raises.

This means that a man may pass all the requirements for enlistment as early as March 1st and be included in the Challenge Platoon with his buddies. Torrance men who feel they can meet the high standards required of the Marines are urged to contact Sergeant Pavey at 2165 Torrance Blvd., or phone FA 8-2330.

Men accepted for the Marines will find the corps largely unchanged from the corps their fathers knew years ago, said the Sergeant. Some things will remain the same as long as there are Marines. Such things as patriotism and the spirit of devotion to duty will always symbolize the word Marine. This should be enough challenge for any young man.

nearly $100,000 with 372 winners receiving from $25 to $1,000. More than 3,000 Southern California students will receive certificates of achievement and more than 1,000 engraved trophies.
